NOTAMS FROM THE EDITOR: Hope that this issue's of some use to you. The addresses & phone numbers should hold for 6-8 months, so you really have NO excuse for not dropping that pal a letter or buzzing him if you're passing thru. Out of the original 611 questionnaires mailed out, 488 were returned as of December 20th, and 456 of this number were received in time to be included in this issue. 192 new subscribers were not mailed questionnaires, their late November-early December subscription precluding our sending them a form. Will allow a two-month return period next time & will catch everybody. Apologies for splitting up families on 2 pages; ditto for omitting MOS on 2d form used. Ratings as published were copied verbatim from report sheets. Take it home to Mama-san; she may need a new name for that future heir or heiress. By our way of thinking, AAs as a group are quite prolific. Hard to believe many years of sweat, flight chex, & exams could be condensed into a few letters of the alphabet. Each pair of letters didn't come easily; they represent toil & trouble, not just versatility. RE: FEB. ISSUE. All news submitted & all columns will return + new Lucky Pin, CAPT JIM MASCHMANN (Sill). Talky on renewals (as of Dec 26) stands at 201 of '611 informed of increase (Didn't Digs, Two). Should know by Jan. 15th whether we launch a magazine or bury a Newsletter. Can't expect everyone to have the same enthusiasm; but I hope we have a common interest. An "Open House" magazine representative of all Army aviation personnel. If we share the same goal, stay with us!

The Army Aviation School was established 1 January 1953 at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, as a Class 1 Activity under the jurisdiction of the Commanding General, Fourth Army.

The School was made fully operational on 1 July 1953. The mission of the School is threefold. 1st, to instruct and train officers, warrant officers, and enlisted personnel of all components of the Army in the duties of Army aviation personnel and in the employment of Army aviation by the various branches in which it is authorized.

COLONEL WASHBURN

2d, to develop and standardize the instruction and training of officers, warrant officers, and enlisted personnel in techniques and tactics relating to Army aviation.

3d, to develop and prepare for dissemination to the Armed Forces, Army aviation doctrine, technique, and tactics; assist in the development of Army aviation equipment; prepare, revise, and administer Army aviation extension literature and other special training publications required by the National Military Establishment; to maintain necessary liaison with other schools and agencies of the National Military Establishment; and to disseminate to the Armed Forces information pertaining to instruction and training methods and materials developed at the Army Aviation School.

The School is organized into the following elements; a Headquarters, including a Command Section and these Staff Sections: Secretary, Material and Services, Operations, Flight Surgeon, and Flight Safety.

Academic Departments include the Departments of Flight, Aviation Maintenance, Tactics and General Subjects, and Combat Development and Publications.

1953 CHANGES SUMMARIZED

Many important changes in the operation of the School occurred during the year. The first aviators to receive transition training in the Army's new twin-engine aircraft, the L-23 Twin Beech, completed their training in January.

Other new aircraft received by the Army Aviation School during the year and incorporated in the training were the H-23 and H-25. The big increase in helicopter training resulted in the construction of a heliport west of Post Field.

A great increase in the number of students in attendance at the School was noted as the year went swiftly by. An increase in all types of aircraft was a natural result, with an accompanying maintenance difficulty because of the shortage of Army aircraft mechanics. To alleviate this condition, the Spartan Aircraft Company was awarded a contract to perform maintenance on both fixed-wing and rotary-wing aircraft at the School and the Spartan Army Aviation Maintenance Division was set up at Sill.

The increase in the number of aircraft called for additional hangar space, and a new hangar costing a half million dollars was nearing completion as 1953 came to an end. Funds for an additional hangar have been approved and when this is completed, the School will have space for all but approximately sixty of the estimated aircraft to be assigned during peace time.

The training of officers from the Medical Service Corps - the newest branch authorized Army aviation - was started in February of 1953. An Instrument Examiner Course was added to courses of instruction and transition training in the H-19, H-23, and H-25 was implemented for pilots and mechanics.

As 1953 came to a close, a shortage of officer personnel hampered the School. This shortage includes both flying and non-flying officers and a temporary freeze of officer personnel has resulted. The non-flying officer shortage made it necessary to put flying officers in non-essential flying jobs, thus further increasing the flight instructor shortage. In order to provide aviators to meet current and future requirements, it is necessary that the Army Aviation School be capable of maximum production and it is hoped that Army aviation and non-flying personnel will be assigned to the School as rapidly as possible to establish a minimum assigned strength for each branch and MOS.

Despite the problems encountered during its 1st year of operation, the Army Aviation School looks forward with confidence to the future, and takes pride in its contribution to the effectiveness of the nation's defense.

"Be Proud"

"GOLDEN - DANGEROUS YEARS"

Since the dawning of mankind man has looked to the sky. Through the centuries he strove to solve the riddle of flight. To accomplish the impossible. This urge drew countless hundreds to their death like a magnet. Then on December 17, 1903, fifty short years ago, the Wrights made the first flight in a heavier-than-air machine. Those were the golden - dangerous years. Many sunburned daredevils of the age stole the hearts of the country. The air was made for those who dared; Curtiss, Martin, Santos Dumont, Louis Bleriot. It is doubted that civilization will ever see their likes again. In 1908 the Army took to the air with the purchase of a Wright biplane and Congress appropriated $30,000 for military aircraft.

LT COL TOWNSEND

In 1911, the Navy became airborne. In '09, Curtiss advertised the 1st aircraft for sale & in the same year flights by Wilbur Wright and Curtiss were made to and from Governors Island.

In '14, we saw the beginning of the Air Weather Service and the 1st passenger haul, a St Petersburg to Tampa hop carrying one passenger, open cockpit. From 1916-17, the Signal Corps based a flight detachment on Governors Island, & records indicate this to be the 1st airfield established by the Army.

Then came WWI and the adaptation of the planes to war. The Germans had the jump on us as usual and scored heavily. However, as experience and technique developed we gained much ground. By Armistice we had such heroes as Capt Rickenbacker and Billy Mitchell. Our production capacity had grown to about 20,000 planes a year.

With war's end, the youthful industry was all but grounded, orders were few, & most aircraft factories closed. It seems that we never learn as this cycle keeps repeating itself.

The 1st Municipal Airport opened in '15 at Atlantic City, NJ, and soon, others followed. The main in the street commenced to think of distance in terms of air travel. Then the roaring '20s, the barnstorming daredevils toured the country scaring the pants off us country folks with their hair-raising feats. These stunt men did much to exploit the capability and limitation of aircraft in that era.

In the late '20s the turn & bank indicator took some of the feel from the seat of our pants, 2-way radio and the automatic pilot followed and opened new horizons. Long-range planning in air mail commenced in '22 and in '26 became a reality. Later development in the '30s brought adjustable pitch propellers, servo motors, retractable landing gear, de-icers, wing flaps, & superchargers.

Only 20 years after the beginning of powered flight we saw planes streaking through the sky at speeds in excess of 200 miles per hour. Military developments of the period included the sinking of 4 warships by Billy Mitchell, a feat that proved the vulnerability of naval craft to aerial bombardment. In '22, the carrier Langley was launched and a new dimension was added to Naval operations.

World shrinkage - As the aircraft industry grew, men of daring, fame seekers, and the military services began to seek far horizons, crossing larger land and sea masses & constantly sought to establish new records for speed, endurance, distance, and altitude. This was the Doolittle, Lindbergh, and Byrd era.

By '37, aviation ranked 49th in the nation's industries. Notable airplanes of this era included the Boeing 80-A, the rigged Ford tri-motor, and Consolidated's Commodore. The first blind flight was demonstrated in '29. Also in 1929, ship to air radio-telephone communication was established. We further find that one-half million acres of cotton were dusted in that year.

In 1935, Douglas produced its famed DC-3 which was destined to become the mainstay of commercial airlines for many years to come. On the 29th of November, 1935, Manila turned out to welcome the "China Clipper." By 1940, the airlines were carrying close to 3 million passengers a year. On December 7, 1941, we had seventeen thousand commercial and private aircraft flying and 63,000 civilian pilots. These civilian aircraft and pilots furnished the cushion needed to give the military services time to develop our military airpower.

The history of airpower and air developments from 1941 to 1953 is known to all. The overall progress of American aviation in these past 50 years has been extolled in widespread celebrations throughout the country during the past year. We all should be intensely proud of the part that we've played and still are playing in this ever-changing, ever-interesting field.
