FIREPOWER Ahead of TIME

The U.S. Army's Advanced Attack Helicopter — Hughes YAH-64 — is the most effective anti-armor weapons system ever developed. Equipped with completely integrated weapons and aircraft systems, the YAH-64 will acquire and destroy hostile targets at maximum standoff ranges during day, night and adverse weather.

Firepower options on the YAH-64 include up to 16 Hellfire missiles, 30mm CHAIN GUN® with 1200 rounds of ammunition and 76 2.75-inch aerial rockets. Weapons systems are designed for rapid reloading under all combat conditions, round-the-clock.

THE Army Aviation Association's 1980 National Convention at Atlanta was another successful and meaningful event in defining and achieving the goals and objectives of Army Aviation.

General Shoemaker's FORSCOM staff accomplished much of the coordination and legwork associated with the professional programming while Art and Doty Kesten did a superb job as usual in putting it all together and they are to be congratulated, also.

These AAAA conventions are unique forums for perpetuating aviation camaraderie and charting the course of Army Aviation.

During the past 19 through 30 March, I traveled to Germany to visit USAREUR aviation units and to participate in their annual AAAA Regional Convention in Garmisch.

This was my first comprehensive trip to Germany since 1962 and my first major visit to the field since taking over the duties of Army Aviation Officer. I was impressed everywhere by the professionalism of Aviation personnel.

We were met by COL Nate Pulliam, and his USAREUR Aviation Office staff started the visit with briefings on a wide range of pertinent subjects. We traveled to Hanau where we visited LTC Dewitt T. Irby, Jr. and his 205th AVIM Battalion, elements of the 503rd Aviation Battalion, and the Synthetic Flight Training System facility.

We later visited the Hohenfels training area to observe LTC Walt Yates and a majority of the 503rd Aviation Battalion who were training in conjunction with elements of the 59th Air Traffic Control Battalion.

The latter's commander, LTC Bert Hervey, briefed us on the special tactical ATC procedures that his unit had developed in the area for the 503rd. This type of coordination is essential to accomplish wartime aviation missions under conditions of unpredictable weather and navigation challenges. We also visited a 503rd Attack Helicopter Company stationed at Buedingen.

A trip to Fulda and the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment would not be complete without an excursion to the border. Commander COL John Sherman Crow accompanied us to an outpost where we observed East German vehicle patrols and a Soviet-made helicopter which flew by several times across the front of our position. Such is the realism that faces us in Europe.

At Feucht, we were briefed by C&C Squadron Commander LTC John Stillman, his commanders, and staff of the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment. We then visited the 3rd Aviation Battalion and Commander LTC Jim Sauer at Grafenwoehr where the unit was conducting aerial gunnery training.

Discussing the challenges

On two occasions I had the opportunity to meet with groups of commanders, aviators, maintenance people, and NCO's, and discuss a wide range of subjects. I appreciated the sincere insights from these people who live with challenges, some of which are unique.

Some units have the inconvenience of inadequate facilities; a universal problem is the shortage of personnel and the added burden placed on units to train new personnel when the NCO's needed to conduct the training are not available.

We at DA recognize these problems. The solutions are going to be slow in coming which means that we must continue to rely on the leadership and perseverance of all to continue to accomplish the mission until relief can be found.

I appreciate the extremely professional and positive attitude exhibited by the people who work under these stressful conditions, and I regret that there is no relief immediately forthcoming.

A highlight of our trip was a visit to the HEERESFLIEGERWAFFENSCHULE, the Federal Republic of Germany's Army Aviation

School at Bueckeburg near Hanover. We received in-depth briefings on organization and doctrine, and training demonstrations which included flying a simulated antiarmor mission in the BO-105 helicopter with roof-mounted sight and HOT missiles. This is a very capable system, similar to our AH-1 Cobra TOW which also lacks a night capability.

I was impressed by the dedication and professionalism of all the officers whom we met there. I owe a special "Thanks!" to Brigadier General Doctor Harro Tiedgen and LTC Hal Roeder, the US Liaison Officer to the German Aviation School, who hosted our stay in Bueckeburg.

During 27-29 March I attended the 1980 USAREUR Region—AAAA Convention at Garmisch. I presented a briefing related to the DA perspective, which focused upon hardware modernization and personnel management.

The main concerns addressed to me during the entire convention were related to both warrant officer and commissioned officer personal management, the deficiency of our current scout helicopter, and the aviator personnel shortages.

Since my return, I have worked on these and have initiated actions related to night vision training, our supply posture, and personnel management.

A very beneficial trip

The trip was very beneficial because of the opportunity it gave to me to observe our aviation posture in Europe, to meet with and talk to our aviation personnel, and to establish a closer link with the USAREUR aviation office.

I hope to make similar visits to other aviation units in the future to assure that we in DA appreciate the fine job that our men and women in Army Aviation are doing.

Recognition of this dedication is accomplished in great part by the numerous national, regional, and chapter awards sponsored by the AAAA.

To those selectees who were singled out at AAAA for their 1979 efforts, I extend my congratulations for their superior performance. Keep up the good work!

“Let us tick off some issues that need our collective attention.”

AS some of you know, I'm a surrogate for the originally asked speaker. That doesn't really bother me because I'm standing in for an aviator. As some of you also know, I have been a supporter of Army Aviation for a number of years.

Looking at this audience is like reviewing the past 25 years of Army Aviation. We have come a long way together through some difficult times. But difficult times still lie ahead, and I thought it might be worthwhile for me to tick off some issues that need our collective attention.

First, the aviation threat: the tremendous anti-aircraft capability of Warsaw Pact, flight in an NBC environment, air-to-air engagement, and the ground to air engagement by friendly forces (mistaken identity).

We counter these threats through training. Additionally, we are faced with aviation force modernization. We will no doubt hear much about force modernization and the new hardware that is coming down the road during the course of this Convention. That's great! We need it all!

We need to think and plan ahead to new concepts and employment techniques. However, remember we must train to fight with what we have and to use the existing equipment effectively and to maximize its capabilities. I've been told that we are only one third of the way through the service life of our present generation of aircraft. So the Huey, the Cobra, and the Chinook will be with us for a long time and chances are, they will be with us during our next conflict.

Maximizing night training

We also must learn how to maximize aviation night training. We have talked about the importance of night operations for several years. Our intelligence indicates it's a must, our doctrine tells us it's necessary, our training programs prescribe it.

Yet, we are not effectively doing it for a variety of reasons (logistical bureaucracy, resistance to change, complacency, you name it!) The state of the art in night operations has made great advances. Our challenge across the battlefield is to take seriously this business of night preparedness in the area of detection and engagement. We are behind the power curve!

Our existing aviation program in night vision goggles, Night Hawk, etc., must improve and march on while industry continues to input new ideas into the requirement.

We must know how to use aviation in adverse weather conditions. Our ability to move freely in adverse weather conditions is one of our most serious limitations. To be effective, we have to train for the rapid deployment of our aircraft into the battle area under all weather conditions.

The need is obvious. When the attack comes it will be in adverse weather. The tank killer that can get to the enemy first is an attack helicopter. Rapid (airmobile) reinforcement and resupply will also be necessary.

Again, training is the key.

Some things to do

- Routinely operating at 200-300 feet above obstacles on instruments to build cockpit confidence.

- Deploying tactical "ATC" assets and integrating the adverse weather capability into our training.

- Forcing the tactical adverse weather flying system to work.

- If problems exist, we must wring them out before day "one" of a war.

- We have those capabilities now, but we must use these. This training is critical to readiness.

I know of some fine training going on with the 59th ATC Battalion with units from both Corps. In fact, the first MTA exercise has just been completed at Hohenfels and Graf. Keep it up!

We've got to do better in safety

Next, we've just got to do better in aviation safety. The improvement in the safety business has to be the increased awareness throughout the chain of command.

We have trained a group of personnel in the aviation safety field who are super. Our instructor pilots, aviators, ground support personnel, and commanders are more safety-conscious and aware of the ways to prevent accidental waste.

Compared to the accident statistics of a few years ago, the Army's are commendable. Although the accident rate has gone down, the cost of equipment and its replacement has multiplied to the point that we can ill afford anything short of zero accidents. So the safety challenge remains.

We've got to work hard on this one, particularly in the aviation field where we are dealing with highly trained personnel and high dollar equipment. Here I'm reminded of that tragic CH-47 accident that took the lives of five fine soldiers. As you know, it was one of my units. The only consolation we have is that there was nothing any of our guys did to cause the accident, nor was there anything they could have done to prevent it. And I'm appalled at what it took to "stand down" the "Hooks" worldwide.

My next area of concern is warrant officer aviator retention. One of our most serious problems in USAREUR — and also worldwide — is our shortage of warrant officer aviators. I know that General Merryman has cranked up the training base to give some relief; however, that is only part of the solution. The real problem is in retention.

MILPERCEN statistics show less than 50% retention at the end of the initial three-year utilization tour with projections that are even lower. We've just got to do better!

Ideas and suggestions sought

MG Bob Elton is taking action where he can. He is seeking ideas and suggestions to reverse these losses. We must work on this one!

The challenges of the 80's, some of which I have just mentioned, will be many and, unfortunately, you will be asked to meet these challenges with limited resources — both people as well as material.

Translated into real terms for the aviation community, this means less fuel and fewer flying hours while you are still required to maintain optimum mission readiness. This will not be any easy challenge to meet.

Not a non-win situation

As a matter of fact, some of you may feel that it is a non-win situation. I don't feel that it's a non-win situation, but I do believe that it will be a tricky course and one that will demand the best from each of us if we are to succeed. Success in this case is being prepared to meet any enemy with a properly trained combined arms team.

You men and women in this room find yourselves in the combat, combat support, and combat service support elements of this combined arms team. Briefly stated, you participate in every phase of the battle.

In addition to the problems we all face related to the reduction of resources, the aviation community faces a particularly unique problem that is directly related to a notion that aviation has no place on the European battlefield. That is about like saying that a piece of terrain is not tank country. About the time you believe that someone sticks a gun tube into your rear.

From all reports, Garmisch—1980 was one of the best attended USAREUR—AAAA Conventions yet held. Some 800 members and wives (plus tots) took in the 26-29 March gathering. The keynoter was LTG Julius W. Becton, Jr., VII Corps Commander, with GEN Frederick J. Kroesen presenting the Region's major awards.

Unfortunately, photos of the following add'l awards did not come out but George E. Johnson, (ARRCOM) was selected as the Region's "DAC of the Year"; CW4 Johnny L. Powell (6th Aviation Det) was the Region's "Safety Person"; and the 70th Transportation Bn (AVIM), commanded by LTC William J. Blair, was the AAAA Region's "Outstanding Aviation Support Unit."

Captain Frame J. Bowers, an Aero Engineer assigned to the USA Aviation Engineering Flight Activity at Edwards AFB, gives our readers the latest word on seat-of-the pants calibrations!

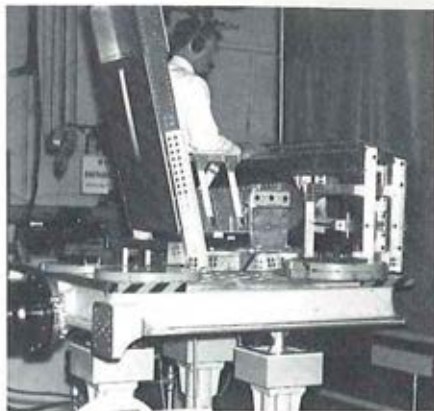

THE U.S. Army Aviation Engineering Flight Activity (USAAEFA) has begun preparation for what is rapidly becoming an annual event: The pilgrimage to St. Paul, Minnesota for helicopter icing tests.

This year, three aircraft will be tested: the UH-1H, the UH-60A Black Hawk, and the YCH-47D Chinook. The Chinook evaluation will have two objectives: determine the flight envelope of the unprotected fiberglass rotor blades in icing conditions; and determine the effectiveness of a prototype deice system to expand the unprotected blades' envelope.

The Black Hawk, on the other hand, has a production blade deice capability on both main and tail rotors. This system's capabilities will also be evaluated.

The Huey, however, will try an entirely different tack. Although equipped with a prototype deice system that was tested last year, that system will be used only as a safety backup. This year's program will look at the benefits of Ice Phobics, which is nothing more than applying a substance to the rotor blades. The substance enhances shedding as the ice builds up, differing from more conventional methods of deicing using electrically heated blankets in blades and control surfaces.

How much does it shake, rattle, and roll?

THE 6° OF FREEDOM MOTION SIMULATOR

Perhaps the most critical situation to be anticipated in all of these icing programs is the possibility of large amplitude vibration due to asymmetric (uneven) ice buildup or shedding. When large asymmetry develops due to differences in ice sheds, there could be a rapid buildup of severe vibration. Since this vibration can occur suddenly without warning, and could even cause structural damage to the helicopter in severe cases, it can adversely affect the crew's morale.

Exposure is a "plus"

It would, therefore, be advantageous to expose the crews to the type of vibration expected before they run into it in actual conditions. This exposure would serve two purposes: it would show the crew varying frequencies and magnitudes of vibration; and it would lessen the puckerfactor when the vibrations began because the crews would be able to identify levels where real danger exists.

By having their pants' seats calibrated, the crews could more effectively evaluate any vibrations experienced; that thus not abort a test too quickly or continue it past a dangerous level.

Fortunately, the apparatus to train the crews exists at the Air Force Aeromedical Research Laboratory, Wright Patterson AFB, in the form of a six degree of freedom motion simulator (Fig. 1). This device used hydraulic pressure to produce lateral, longitudinal, and combination vibrations at selected frequencies of up to 50 hertz (cycles per second) and peak accelerations of up to 1.5 g's (1.5 times the force of gravity).

The laboratory's motion specialist, Dr. Richard Shoenberger, formulated a training program to train USAAEFA's crews. Each crew member was exposed to lateral vibrations (similar to those produced by an asymmetric ice shed) at varying accelerations (0.05, 0.1, 0.2, 0.3, and 0.4 g's) and at frequencies peculiar to their particular helicopter.

In addition, the final points were a combined 0.1 g vertical vibration added to varying amplitudes of lateral vibration at the one-per-rev frequency. During each run, the crew members evaluated the vibration characteristics (Fig. 2) in terms of severity and how they interfered with his ability to perform flight tasks.

This vibration training exposed crewmembers to a very stressful environment and eliminated some of the uncertainty of a situation that few operational pilots experience.

By calibrating the seat-of-their-pants, the Army crewmembers will be able to determine

DEGREE OF VIBRATION	DESCRIPTION OF VIBRATION LEVEL	PILOT RATING
None		0
Slight	Not apparent to experienced aircrew fully occupied by their tasks, but noticeable if their attention is directed to it.	1 2 3
Moderate	Experienced crewmen are aware of the vibration but it does not affect their work, at least over a short period.	4 5 6
Severe	Vibration is immediately apparent, even when crewmen are fully occupied. Performance is affected, or tasks only done with difficulty.	7 8 9
Intolerable	Sole preoccupation of aircrew is to reduce the vibration level.	10

Based upon the Subjective Vibration Assessment Scale developed by the Aeroplane and Armament Experimental Establishment, Boscombe Down, England.

how much more accurately how much of what type vibration they are experiencing, and thus can more effectively and safely evaluate the icing protection being developed for the U.S. Army's helicopters. ◀

Army Aviation's Doubting Thomases are many!

WELL, the world's greatest living non-rated aviator is delighted to be here tonight. A funny thing happened to me on my way to Atlanta today (in an Army aircraft.)

I was flying in from the Citadel in Charleston and on the way here my aide finally told me what I was supposed to do tonight.

He handed me this white sheet of paper which said, "General Meyer makes appropriate remarks pertinent to Army Aviation and then introduces the commander of the "Outstanding Aviation Unit."

An inopportune time

Just as I read, ". . . makes appropriate remarks pertinent to Army Aviation," we ran into that thunderstorm that was between here and Charleston.

So I won't make the remarks that are "appropriate and pertinent to Army Aviation" right now that I made in that particular instance in time, but I would just tell you that after I skipped lunch today I tried to decide what I might say that was pertinent to Army Aviation tonight.

I decided that since this was Saturday, and in the Catholic Church now you can go to anticipatory Masses, that I would go to Mass. (Maj. Gen.) John McEnery went with me and the "Church didn't collapse" . . . the priest made that comment!

One thing I learned about Army Aviators I didn't know . . . they seldom pray except when the red lights go on.

Anyhow, the gospel tonight in church happened to be about St. Thomas and the instance in which he was having doubts, and Christ said, "Put your hands into the wounds."

So I thought I would talk a bit this evening about doubting Thomases, and I would say that as far as Army Aviation is concerned that I doubt that any other single element of the Army has ever had more doubting Thomases in my lifetime.

Whether it be the doubting Thomases who doubted the Howze Board, and then created the Beech Board to look at the Howze Board, and then created the Meyer and McEnery Board to look at the Beech Board, and then created ARCSA I and ARCSA II and ARCSA III to convince the Army, to convince the OSD, and to convince the Congress that there really was a need for Army Aviation.

Whether it was the need for attack helicopters, reconnaissance helicopters, or whatever else it had to be, you have had your share of doubting Thomases.

An even greater need

The need for Army Aviation today is even greater than it has been in the past. The role that it can play in the future on the battlefields of Europe, the Middle East, the Persian Gulf, in northeast Asia, and elsewhere continue to challenge Army Aviators and to challenge the Army. So the doubting Thomases have to suddenly understand that there is really a need for Army Aviation.

An address by General Edward C. Meyer,
Chief of Staff, U.S. Army,
at the 1980 AAAA Awards
Banquet in Arlanta, Ga.,
Saturday, April 12, 1980

FOURSOME—GEN Robert M. Shoemaker, Commander, USA FORSCOM; MG George S. Beatty, Jr., President, AAAA; SFC Leland E. Hinely, "Aviation Soldier of the Year"; and GEN Edward C. Meyer, Chief of Staff, are shown in an informal grouping just prior to the 1980 AAAA National Awards Banquet.

How can we prove to the doubting Thomases that need (for Army Aviation)? Well, I guess that we have to let them put their fingers into the wounds, and we have to explain to them as honestly and as carefully as we can what its true capabilities are.

But we also have to show them through the professionalism that Army Aviators have been able to provide in the past, what true professionals can, in fact, do.

This morning you had the opportunity to hear some of the young professionals who are making steps forward in Army Aviation, carrying on in the same context that you, the little bit older and little bit longer-in-the-tooth aviators, began.

And these young professionals showed you that Army Aviation is continuing to rise and still does have great opportunities, and that they are filling in your footsteps quite well.

the Preservation of Old Friends"

1980 SPOOF ROSTER

c/o Army Aviation Magazine, 1 Crestwood Road, Westport, CT 06880

THE "WHAT"

■ ■ The annual "SPOOF Roster" is a complimentary listing of certain professional-personal information on AAAA's retired military members. Any roster title that implies grey heads, or a hesitant step, or gnarled hands would disturb our senior readers — Who likes to be called a "Retread"? — so the SPOOF acronym was chosen.

THE "WHO"

■ ■ Each AAAA member who is in a military retired status, and who is carried on the Association rolls in this manner, is provided with an "update form" each January.

THE "WHY"

■ ■ Many of our retired military readers, in not moving about from place to place in a retirement situation, cannot periodically place their corresponding addresses in the magazine's "PCS" columns which only report changes. Hence, they lose contact with many of their old friends with whom they still wish to communicate. Some form of annual roster seemed desirable; the SPOOF was the result.

THE "WHEN"

■ ■ The long-term plan is to publish a SPOOF Roster as an insert in each May issue of Army Aviation.

assurance that the profession of Army Aviation will, in fact, rise and fly off into the decades ahead, leading the way for the rest of the Army.

You can all be as proud of the 146th Aviation Company as I am, and of Major Loudermilk and Sergeant Jones who represent those soldiers.

I'm very honored to make this presentation at this time.

Aviation Soldier of the Year Award

PRESIDENT Beatty, General Meyer, and friends of Army Aviation and fellow aviators. There are hundreds of thousands of good soldiers in the Army, and many thousand fine soldiers who support Army Aviation in one capacity or another . . . cooks, supply people, maintenance folks, operations specialists, crew chiefs, flight engineers, signal people.

The one who won our Award this year is an aviation maintenance supervisor. It isn't easy to be a good maintenance supervisor. Your life is bedeviled by people who talk in strange terms, PLL's and ASL's, and you get to be involved in publications with mysterious names like -10, -20, and 23P's, and manuals that I don't understand.

You have to cope with imperious maintenance officers, demanding operations officers, and arrogant flight crews. You have to weld semi-skilled soldiers into trained teams that do their very critical business perfectly. It's pretty tough!

Good aviation maintenance supervisors are the kinds of people who can go into a department the week before Christmas, buy a box containing a little wagon or bicycle with a label on the outside that says, "Some minimum assembly required," can go home and can then open that white paper that says, "Put pin A through hole B and secure washer C with nut D" when there is nothing in that package that looks like nut D . . . and still make the bicycle work! That kind of genius.

Sergeant Leland E. "Pete" Hinely is the very best that we have in the Army that can do that sort of thing and can work that kind of magic.

As we talked tonight (at the head table), I said, "Sergeant Hinely, what made you become a soldier?" His wife hasn't the slightest idea I'm going to tell this and as a matter of fact, he would not have told me if he thought I would. But it turns out that in the hamlet of Richmond Hills halfway between Hinesville, GA and Fort Stewart, Sergeant Hinely (then Pete Hinely, 18 years old) had a minor tiff with a lady friend.

"I'll show you."

It was one of those things that for reasons that we won't go into tonight that was resolved by "I'll show you. I'll enlist in the Army and go off," and he did, enlisting in 1962. Three years later he was a sergeant.

He enlisted as a signal personnel. Now there's nothing wrong with signal people but after two years, he decided that he really wanted to be an aviation maintenance supervisor. He enlisted, went to Ft. Eustis, and then joined the 11th Air Assault Division and was with us when it was converted to the 1st Cav. He was assigned to D Company, 15th Maintenance Battalion, and maintained aircraft of the squadron which General (James) Smith and I commanded during the first year, the 1/9.

Since then he's done many things, including a three-year tour as one of the sky marshals several years back to stop hijacking. He's now the Chief of Production Control of Company A, 501st Aviation Bn, 1st Armored Division, U.S. Army-Europe.

And I would like to go back and mention that within two years after he joined the Army he did one of the smartest things he's done in a lifetime of doing good: he went back and found that girl and apologized or she did. Anyway, Lynn is here with him tonight; their three children are in Germany; and Lynn's parents are also here, and I wonder if they would stand and be recognized.

Lynn was very careful in our meeting just before this dinner to tell me before she knew anything of this story saying, "I'm with him all the way. I love it. I love what we are doing."

The Hinelys are coming back to Ft. Stewart in June and they'll join U.S. Army Forces Command, and we're delighted to have you. Would you join me up here, Sergeant First Class "Pete" Hinely, our "Aviation Soldier of the Year."

The 1979 DAC of the Year Award

I'm deeply honored to be here tonight to represent General (John R.) Guthrie, and to present this award to Maggie Brown. AAAAA could not have found a better recipient!

I've known Maggie personally since 1969. She meant a lot to the Army; she meant a lot to DARCOM; and she meant a lot to aviation.

She won this Award for her duties during 1979 when she reorganized DARCOM's total aviation assets. But we ought to remember Maggie for more than that.

She spent 34 years with the Army, starting as a GS-1 at Granite City Engineer Depot. She ended her career at TSARCOM as the Chief of the aviation assets at DARCOM. Maggie knew everyone in DOD, all the way down to the worker force in TSARCOM. She knew everyone in industry. She was that kind of person, a total professional.

She epitomized the successful career woman, and she is the first woman to win this award.

Maggie Brown has done considerable things for Army Aviation . . . She equipped the CH-34's for Europe during the Berlin incident in 1961. She was helpful in supporting the Howze Board, providing aircraft for their final demonstrations.

Mrs. Vernon Ditton accepts "DAC of the Year" honors for her mother at April 12 ceremonies.

In 1964 she distributed all the UH-1's worldwide during the Vietnam crisis. During 1966-1969 she arranged for the ferrying of all new production helicopters from Bell to the West Coast. In 1969 she helped to set up the training for the Vietnamese in the UH-1 mod program. She was also most loyal to AAAAA, being a Charter Member of the Lindbergh Chapter.

But I came to know her in a different way — as a compassionate human being. As I lay in Walter Reed Hospital recovering from cancer this February, I was despondent over the fact that I had found out that they might not have gotten it all, and heard that I'd have to take radioactive treatments for six weeks.

I didn't know where to turn and then the next week I got a letter from Maggie Brown. I don't know how Maggie Brown found out (about me), but the letter came and it told me to have courage and to fight back just as long as I could.

She had gone through the same and God would be with us and we would overcome. Well, I did but Maggie didn't.

She was a dedicated professional, a courageous woman, a warm loving person who reached out to help her God, her country, her family, and her fellow man. You can be justifiably proud of your selection . . . I am proud and pleased to announce that her daughter, Mrs. Vernon Ditton, is here to accept the award for her.

Brown, Hq.
USA TSARCOM,

AT my mother's retirement party last Fall and she retired because of her illness, they called her the "Godmother of Army Aviation." They said she'd done more for Army Aviation than probably any other civilian had.

When she received the call from General (Richard H.) Thompson about this AAAA Award on Wednesday, March 5, which was about five days before she passed away, she was so thrilled and proud.

She said that she didn't think she would receive it because she had retired, and thought the Award would go to someone else, but winning it did so much for her.

When I got to the hospital that afternoon, she looked better than she had in months, and the elation from this news enabled her to go home that weekend. She got so much better almost overnight that the doctors let her go home that weekend.

She was so thrilled. She had even made her reservations for Atlanta. She was determined she was going to come.

I found in her notes recently that she had made about this. She had even started writing her acceptance speech and she had commented in it how proud and honored she was and yet how humble she felt to be the Awardee over all of the other outstanding nominees.

She wrote that she was so very thankful to all of the people she had worked for and with for the past 35 years as they had helped to make this Award to her possible.

I want to thank all of you very much for this Award you've given to my mother, Maggie Brown.
—Mrs. Vernon Ditton

The Outstanding RC Aviation Unit

THE top award that a Reserve Component can win in a year is the AAAA award, and it's very actively sought after. If we were to just look at numbers alone and just look at the 237 National Guard and USAR (aviation) units that we have in the Army, you'd see that the competition has to be fierce.

I'm sure that in some years it's difficult to select the unit because you're comparing some intangibles of training, safety, and whatever, and however the person wrote up the award.

This year I wasn't privileged to be a member of the Awards Committee, but I doubt if there was any competition for the winner is the Brigade Aviation Section of the 92nd Infantry Brigade of the Puerto Rico National Guard.

I'll just tell you two significant events in which the unit participated that obviously earned the Award for them:

At the end of August last year, "Hurricane David" hit Puerto Rico. Immediately after the passage of the storm, the Brigade Aviation Section was alerted at 0200 in the morning, and you've got to remember that these are civilians who live throughout the island of Puerto Rico and that military business is their second business.

By 0600 — four hours later — they had eight helicopters flying throughout the island rescuing people and saving lives. In the week that was to follow they evacuated over 500 people from flooded areas, and were credited with ten lives saved as well as transporting some 10,000 lbs of emergency supplies.

Captain Anibal Torres, the Commander of the Brigade Aviation Section of the 92nd Infantry Brigade of the Puerto Rico National Guard.

Almost immediately after that, "Hurricane Frederick" hit and devastated the neighboring country of the Dominican Republic. Our State Department asked the Governor of Puerto Rico if he would offer assistance to the Dominican Republic and he did.

The Brigade Aviation Section members were asked to volunteer to go to the devastated country one night, and almost to a man they did. The next morning those eight helicopters were airborne enroute to the Dominican Republic. In all some 22 aviators and 48 support personnel responded, and they were down there about five weeks.

They transported some 600,000 lbs. of food and supplies, and some of you who were at today's professional sessions heard the 101st talk about their actions down there and the conditions in which the people were living, literally starving by the tens of thousands and those 600,000 lbs. of supplies undoubtedly saved thousands of people's lives.

They lifted more than a thousand people from flooded areas, and brought in doctors, nurses, engineers, and other people to help reconstruct the country. The unit was credited with saving some 200 lives outright from flooding.

Atrocious flying conditions

I asked Captain Anibal Torres, the unit's commander, a little while ago of all those days in which they were flying which he considered bad. He said that while flying in the northern part of the island of Puerto Rico where they did most of their flying because of the extensive devastation, the entire week was flown under atrocious conditions.

Down in the Dominican Republic more than half the flight time was bad during the five weeks, and while there they flew up to 10,000 feet amongst the clouds trying to save the lives of the people up in the little villages that were cut off . . . and for those who might think that flying under such conditions is unsafe, I would hasten to add this same aviation section has won 12 awards in eight years by flying without accident.

Without further ado, I'd like to ask Captain Torres and Sergeant First Class Hector Ramirez, who is the senior NCO, and Brigadier General Herbert H. Temple, the Deputy Director of the Army National Guard, to join me here at the podium.

Army Aviator of the Year Award

WHILE I was Director of Army Aviation some years ago, I had on one occasion the privilege of meeting quite briefly the famous Eddie Rickenbacker, who was then President of Eastern Air Lines.

I believe most of you remember that he was the "Ace of Aces" of what used to be called the Army Air Corps in World War I, and had to his credit a really quite amazing number of kills of German aircraft.

I was surprised and pleased in my conversation with Eddie Rickenbacker to receive his very strong endorsement of what Army Aviation at that time was trying to accomplish, and also to receive his encouragement to keep at the lines that we had set for its future development.

Tonight, we see another Rickenbacker . . . I have already asked him if he were a descendant of the famous Captain, and he said that he was not. But just the same, this country's most prominent pioneer combat airman, Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, if he were alive, would be pleased and proud to know this one.

Our own Rickenbacker truly technically and professionally a superb pilot, an outstanding soldier, and an inspiring teacher.

I don't recall anyone on any occasion saying that I was the best of anything, but if I had a choice, I would have asked that I be called "Best Aviator."

I now present to you with much pride the "1979 Army Aviator of the Year" — an attack aircraft commander, a pilot with extensive combat in Vietnam, and later a standardization instructor pilot and instrument flight examiner. Overall, a truly expert flyer.

I would say — with all sincerity — the sort of man this country desperately needs in its Armed Forces if this country is to meet the great challenges that face us in the last two decades of this century. I present to you Chief Warrant Officer Ernest W. Rickenbacker.

ACCEPTANCE REMARKS OF CW3 ERNEST W. RICKENBACKER. "AA OF THE YEAR"

GEN Meyer, GEN Shoemaker, distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen. I'm filled with a very deep personal and professional pride for this Award that is being presented to me tonight.

It's not so much a pride in self-gratification as it is a feeling of camaraderie with all of those who are associated with Army Aviation. I think we're all guilty sometimes of overlooking those individuals who are the doers, the achievers, the ones who go about seeking the additional responsibility above and beyond those daily mundane tasks with which we are faced in the Army today, and I speak especially of aviation.

We're all guilty of that and I know of many people who are equally as capable of standing exactly where I'm standing right now and saying words to this effect, but I'm very fortunate that I'm the one that was chosen to be able to speak to you tonight.

In reference to GEN Howze's comments about Eddie Rickenbacker, I've had to live up to this name and I'm glad that I endeavored to pursue a career along the lines of the attack helicopter when I got out of flight school, and that essentially is all that I've done other than flying as an examiner in the UH-1.

But I'm going to tell it to you like it is and speak from the hip. If I have to go when the balloon goes up — and I hope I'm one of the first — I want to be in an aircraft that gives the enemy the best opportunity to give his life for his country.

But without the support of all those "doers" I wouldn't be here tonight. There's one individual among us here in this very room who was the ultimate in support in my Army endeavors — both as an enlisted NCO and as an officer — who has put up with the long hours, the late-for-dinner phone calls, the TDYs, a very wonderful person, my wife Sharon.

Thank you very much.

McClellan Aviation Safety Award

UNDERSTAND from one of the waiters that a minute ago it was very difficult to hear in the back of the room, so out of respect for (Generals) Harry Kinnard and Glenn Goodhand, we'll pause for a few minutes while they move back to that area.

I was fortunate to run into (Maj Gen) Jim Merziman before this banquet. They'd told me this year I had my regular nine minutes to speak and, fortunately, Jim — who substituted for me at the last moment last year — only used six. So I have twelve this year!

I also learned that at today's Hall of Fame Luncheon that I was unable to attend that His Royal Highness Prince Faisal had made a very generous ($25,000) contribution to the Army Aviation Museum Fund. I normally don't solicit for the McClellan Foundation in public, but when I left Washington this morning our balance was $245.00!

Mr. President, General Meyer, Honored Guests, and friends of Army Aviation. The bureaucratic aftermath of the tornado that killed five of our Dana employees in Wichita Falls, Texas, last year prevented me from joining you.

This year, equally virulent winds, also capable of destroying our livelihoods and our homes, are again sweeping the country. But in that there are no provisions for disaster insurance against politicians, political hurricanes, the rising tides of inflation, and economic tornados, I decided I may as well come to Atlanta and add to your woes! . . . and until just a few minutes ago I was very happy about that.

Being with friends of long standing away from the insidious demands of Washington has been most pleasant. I've been shown great kindness, complimented on my past efforts, and otherwise indulged. As is my habit, I was becoming quite taken with myself.

However, during the reception that preceded this delightful banquet, a very attractive young woman whose age I judged to be about 30, approached me. "Oh, Mr. Haugerud," she explained, "I am so happy to finally meet you. I have heard so much about you."

"From whom?" I asked rhetorically, permitting myself the slightest preen.

"A woman who worked with you on the Senate staff," she smilingly retorted. "My grandmother."

So much for Atlanta. Perhaps things will be better for me at our AAAA meeting next year in Washington.

"A self-confessed Democrat!"

In that this is an election year, I know that some of you might suspect that I might make a comment or two on our candidates and on the situation in which we find ourselves. In that I am a self-confessed Democrat, I thought it only fair that I touch first on those on our side . . . Now take John Anderson! . . .

Sorry about that . . . wrong column. As you know, our President is securely barricaded in the White House in the Rose Garden. Now, of course, all of us here support the President, but there are detractors in the land who maintain that this is a political ruse, and that should Senator Kennedy win in Pennsylvania, President Carter would emerge forthwith from the Rose Garden and go on the campaign trail.

This is not so. Mr. Carter is a God-fearing, law abiding man who knows that it is a serious crime to leave the scene of an accident!

Senator Kennedy, on the other hand, has become a genius at recognizing victory in the most abject of defeats. His optimism knows no bounds as he races towards the light that he sees at the end of each tunnel, and in spite of the fact that it seems pretty clear that the light is attached to the locomotive of an onrushing train! But the Senator has demonstrated that if nominated, he could be elected . . . as the Mayor of New York!

Your challenge is to overcome these obstacles, and with other arms and services, strengthen our combat power. Easy task? Of course not!

I am not suggesting that we will not experience difficulties in reaching our objectives. But now is not the time for hand-wringing. Now is the time for aggressive, imaginative, and innovative training and planning to overcome our obstacles.

Not the way to fight!

My experience tells me that we tend to train our systems in a vacuum much to the detriment of total force readiness. For instance, maneuver elements too often train along without field artillery, engineers, or aviation support. In the case of aviation support, if it is included, what I often see are combat assaults conducted in isolation from other important supporting arms — field artillery and air — which is hardly the way we expect to fight, or for that matter, the manner in which we did fight in Vietnam.

I think it is obvious to all of us who participated in that war that the orchestration of combat activities at the critical point was difficult. It was not a simple exercise. It may have seemed so after your second tour, but it was not as routine or indident-free as it seems in our memories. Application of firepower where we need it is not something that comes easy.

We cannot assume that aviation assets will always be present at the critical point with maximum capability, because the minute we make this assumption, I can tell you that it isn't going to happen. It won't happen by wishing or hoping that it will happen.

Some tasks needing attention

I don't want to become too specific concerning the nitty gritty of your business, but I am going to mention some combat-related tasks that I feel need particular attention.

Attack helicopter integration into the maneuver company commanders' war remains today a terribly difficult and complicated task. I have watched this matter for some time now and I am still concerned about the integration of this weapons system into the ground company commanders' war which is constantly changing and almost always characterized by poor communication and confusion. My 36 years of service give me no reason to think it will change.

We need good SOP's buttressed by aggressive liaison and eyeball contact if we expect to employ the Cobra as we all know it should be. When we add the A-10 to the equation, the problem increases by a significant amount. Anyone who thinks that the focus of all this firepower on the target is easy doesn't understand the prob-

A role for the AAH!

I am somewhat encouraged by some of the imaginative Cobra training I have recently seen at the major training centers. It is progress but we have a way to travel.

In Europe, I see a role for the assault helicopter, whether this be the movement of troops to respond to a rear area threat or to move combat troops within the main battle area is problematical and obviously related to the local situation. The point to be made here is that I visualize missions for the assault helicopter, and I see little rationale to support any argument suggesting that there is no role.

Refugee problems and traffic congestion may well force us to move combat troops by air. If we do not train to use alternative means of moving our combat soldiers we may be caught short simply because someone once said helicopters have no role in European land combat.

The appreciation of relationships

We cannot afford to have aviation become a stovepipe operation as it was during the 1950's. The Army made great progress during the Vietnam era simply because of a recognition of the relationship between all our combat support and combat service support units. But then this appreciation for relationships disappeared.

I am charging you assembled here today to get with your ground counterpart to show them what you can and cannot do for mission accomplishment. Now I am not expecting you to carry the ball alone. Your counterpart has an obligation in the strengthening of this relationship and I will see that they receive the same message that you are receiving here this morning. But you must be aggressive in demonstrating that you as a group mean business when it comes to total mission involvement.

Meanwhile, Jerry Brown has levitated back to Sacramento. The laid back California style and jargon just did not sell in the East. I knew that he was in deep trouble when I saw a poll that revealed that 72% of the voters in New Hampshire thought that Jacuzzi was a Congressman from New Jersey!

On the other side, our good friend, Governor Reagan, seems to be having a little trouble with the issues. The controversy about the draft had raged for three weeks when he turned to an aide and said that he was getting damn sick of this price war between Anheuser Busch and Schlitz!

He met with a group of farmers near Salina, Kansas, and they asked him about "parity." The Governor pondered a bit and then told them it was all right to gargle but not fit to swallow!

Flair and class"

Our old friend, George Bush, is still in the race but limping badly. He'll probably never recover from the revelations in Mr. Loab's Manchester Guardian that not only had he been a member of the Trilateral Commission and a co-conspirator in Skull and Bones at Yale, but they had also matriculated at that same school while still a teenager in the presence of a minor.

Our friend, John Connolly, has also departed. John left with the flair and class that is characteristic of his career. As you recall, John spent $11 million and gained one single delegate, Ida Mae Mills of Camden, Arkansas. As John was about to depart the race, he looked at his campaign treasury after his defeat in South Carolina, and being as sentimental as he is, he ordered the last $600 to be spent in having Ida Mae Mills bronzed and shipped to the Connolly Library in Houston where she'll be on display starting in 1982."

I tried to explain to CWO (Harold) Hintze on my left, who is the McClellan Award winner tonight, that speaking here was a very difficult assignment. I had to split my remarks between frivolity and seriousness in that it was expected of me.

I did not want anything that I said prior to my remarks about him to in any way reflect on the seriousness and the hard work that he's put into the efforts that have brought him this Award.

Life Support Equipment is a very difficult area and it's very hard for many of us to understand even though we've been in aviation for some time. To read the documents and to try to understand the incredible amount of dedication and work that it takes to achieve what he has done in the Life Support area.

I ask all of you who haven't read his citation in our dinner program to do so because for me to try to explain, I'm certain, would do an injustice to him. It is, therefore, with great pride and pleasure that I introduce Chief Warrant Officer (W3) Harold D. Hintze, who is the 1979 winner of the McClellan Aviation Safety Award.

The leadership of the Army, from platoon leader to the Chief of Staff, is going to turn to you again, just as we turned to you in Vietnam, to carry a large burden. You have a rich legacy to uphold.

General Hamilton Howze and the Howze Board answered the airmobility challenge that propelled Army Aviation to its peak integration into the combined Army team in Vietnam. Of the men who translated General Howze's ideas into practice, many names come to my mind: LTC Harry Kinnard, GEN Bob Shoemaker, LTG Phip Seneff, and MG Jim Smith, all personal friends — and many of you sitting in this room.

General Blanchard was the leader in bringing this most important element to the forefront within Europe in what he termed multi-national interoperability. Effective interoperability programs in peacetime training can optimize the strengths, identify the weaknesses, and reduce problem areas of the NATO forces to work and fight together.

We have had some great successes in our Autumn Forge exercises in this area and the aviation community in particular has made great strides through their Albatross exercises. Previous Albatross exercises reduced the communication barrier and standardized SOP's. Albatross IV is planned for May of this year where we hope to expand further the gains we have made.

This decade will demand increased emphasis in this area. Remember this. If war were to start today, in all likelihood, some of the first combat units to strike the enemy would be attack helicopter units.

Our challenge is to be ready!
