Fort Rucker celebrates AA's 40th Anniversary

Amidst a static and air display, drill teams, open houses, a carnival/ bazaar, band concerts, and the like, USAAVNC personnel and several hundred visitors celebrated Army Aviation's 40th Anniversary over the June 3-6 weekend at Ft. Rucker.

Five Commanders

Delk M. Oden; and LTGs John J. Tolson, III, and 6Robert R. Williams.

At a June 3 Army Aviation Ball sponsored by AAAA's Aviation Center Chapter, the ceremonial cutting of the birthday cake celebrating 40 years of Army Aviation was done by WO1 Douglas Wornell, the Army's youngest aviator at the time; retired BG William W. Ford, center, the Army's oldest aviator; and MG Carl H. McNair, Jr., the USAAVNC Commander.

BG Ford, the commander of the 1942 Air Training Detachment, and a group of approximately 20 World War II 1942-1945 Army Liaison Pilots, attended the anniversary. Prominent in the group were the Grasshoppers, the June, 1942 L-Pilots.

At a June 3 Ft. Rucker meeting, AAAA's Nat'l Executive Board voted to spearhead a program to return an official USPS 50th Anniversary commemorative stamp.

We've won one for the taxpayer.

"The U.S. Army's CH-47 modernization program is ahead of schedule, meeting cost targets, and exceeding technical requirements..."

Today's economic conditions demand that American taxpayers receive top value for their defense dollars. Boeing Vertol and its suppliers are providing that value in the U.S. Army's CH-47 Chinook Modernization Program. In addition, as the first modernized Chinook with state-of-the-art technology left Boeing Vertol's Philadelphia plant, it did so ahead of schedule.

The plan by Congress and the Department of Defense to modernize 436 Chinook helicopters during the next 10 years is a prudent one. It will enable the Army to meet its medium-lift helicopter requirements, while saving over $1 billion in development and operating costs.

Fleet modernization, rather than designing and developing a new helicopter, has cut the time to field this advanced aircraft. Army field commanders will soon be moving bigger and heavier weaponry and other payloads farther, faster and more reliably than ever before.

Close and continued cooperation between the U.S. Army and Boeing Vertol and its suppliers has made this program work. The result is a win for the taxpayer, a defense program ahead of schedule, meeting cost targets.

Bell's Modernized AH-1S: Suited for the best-suited.

■ When a man who wears one of these patches puts himself in a Bell AH-1S Cobra, he knows there's not a better combat-proven attack helicopter.

It's sleek: Easy to handle, agile enough for terrain flight. It's tough: Ballistic tolerance of components plus survivability features protect the aircraft and crew from numerous threat systems. It's versatile: TOW missile, 20mm cannon and 2.75 in. rockets plus sophisticated fire control increase the Cobra's fire power ability. It's the best-suited attack helicopter to engage targets on the modern, armor-intensive battlefield.

The Modernized AH-1S Cobra. Evolved to meet the changing nature of the threat. And Bell believes in providing the best for those who demand it.

This top-ranking military jetprop is volunteering for more special missions.

Beechcraft's rugged C-12 jetprop has earned its military stripes as a hardworking military transport. Its turboprop economy has been saving money for the Army, Air Force and Navy and Marines all over the world. In addition, the C-12 has gained an enviable reputation for reliability.

Now it's ready for more special assignments.

With available installations for aerial surveillance, tactical field support, ECM, photography, Infra-Red, Side Looking Radar (SLAR), remote sensing, and many others, this versatile aircraft offers a broad range of mission capabilities.

And because many of these special equipment packages can be quickly removed or converted, one C-12 airframe can be used to fill the roles of several special missions aircraft.

In addition, the comprehensive Beech logistics support program now assumes total responsibility for all on-site maintenance, crew training, parts inventory, and worldwide technical service. As a result, the C-12 continues to deliver operational readiness rates well in excess of 90%.

If your command could use a special mission support system with this kind of multi-role capability, write Beech Aircraft Corporation, Aerospace Programs, Wichita, Kansas 67201.

The 40th Anniversary

time to celebrate!

By BG Ellis D. Parker
Army Aviation Officer
Dept. of the Army

This past weekend (5-6 June) I had the opportunity to visit the Seat of Army Aviation, Fort Rucker, to share in the celebration of the 40th Anniversary of what we have come to claim as the birthday of Army Aviation.

It was the 6th of June 1942 when the first liaison airplanes began operation, giving the Army its own unique aviation element. As the L-4 and L-5 and other elder airplanes were taxied by the crowd at Fort Rucker on 5 June, one could not help but feel a great deal of pride in being associated with them and with the modern aviation family and the important role it has come to play in the modern United States Army.

Reminiscing!

This reminiscing was real for many of the attendees at the celebration. Army Aviation could have called the roll for all the significant players were there. It was stimulating to see all those familiar faces again — in reunion, in fact.

The affair was blessed with good weather, sunny and quite warm, except for an Alabama thunderstorm on Friday, which cleared off the Officers' Club patio. All of us who wore an overseas cap came home with the characteristic U-shaped "parade" suntan on the face.

And the luncheon at the Officer's Club was exactly as advertised. Its "old fashioned prices" included beer at 10 cents a can, hamburgers at 25 cents, and hot dogs at 15 cents.

This year there are other celebrations of Army Aviation's Birthday. One such I know of is to be held at Pittsburg, Kansas during Oct. 16-18. Pittsburg was the site of the original Army L-Pilot training and the city, which holds an annual "Airport Day", dedicated its 1982 affair to celebrate their contribution to the meager but important beginning of Army Aviation.

The city renovated the Stillwell Hotel where the trainees lived and invited Fort Riley to send helicopters for a static display, rappelling demonstrations, and the like. We know they'll have good support from the Army Aviation community.

We've only just begun

All of this serves to remind us in Army Aviation of our heritage. We have to take great pride in our profession — we unique flying soldiers — when we realize where we have been and how far we have come. And we must not forget that we have only just begun to develop the kind of effective fighting force that is capable of giving the Nation a part of the force it requires to fulfill its missions and national goals.

I challenge all of you to keep this uppermost in your minds as you manage, as you train, as you fly.

Apache Power

The T700: More power for the AAH

The rugged, remote Army flight environment has earned the T700 its reputation for toughness and reliability. The field statistics prove it. Now a higher-power derivative is being readied to power the Hughes AH-64A Apache Advanced Attack Helicopter. Designated the T700-GE-701, the engine produces 10% more power for extended NOE, and hot and high missions. In addition, the -701 offers outstanding fuel efficiency, simple maintenance and low life-cycle cost.

The T700. In service and growing for a stronger Army.

Reserve Components

The United States
Army Reserve

The solid Component

By LTC Dan C. Riley
Office, Chief of Army
Reserve (OCAR),
Dept. of the Army

AS the strength of the Soviet Union approaches 5.8 million members, the consumption of GNP by that size force imposes a tremendous drain upon the economy of the USSR.

Beset by inadequate industrial productivity, the Kremlin demands extreme sacrifice on the part of the individual citizen in order that Soviet military power can be sustained.

Political and military doctrine behind the Iron Curtain contends that tremendous military might is necessary for defense. Certainly, the searing military experiences in Russian history have influenced the mentality of that country's leadership. Military superiority will be achieved and maintained at any cost.

A bargain in defense

By contrast, the United States provides for its defense and contributes to world stability at a much lower relative cost to its people. The important international product, 'deterrence', is bought for a fraction of what the Soviets pay for their notion of military superiority, in terms of East/West GNPs.

This bargain in national defense is possible because of the bent of the American people to contribute willingly and unselfishly to the total defense effort.

Perhaps the most convincing evidence of our ability to depend on voluntary effort in behalf of national security is the existence of the Reserve Components such as the U.S. Army Reserve and the Army National Guard where citizen soldiers contribute their own time and abilities toward the common defense.

A vital part of the Total Army Force resides within the aviation community of the U.S. Army Reserve. USAR Aviation embodies a highly experienced and dedicated group of professionals, the majority of whom are combat-proven veterans who maintain their critical skills and stand ready to serve anywhere in the world if needed.

The fine reputation of the USAR aviation program is attracting former Army Aviators in increasing numbers as units throughout CONUS fill to capacity. Special authority has been granted to ab-

Lean & Mean.

Turbomach™ power.
It gets these mean birds airborne.

Self-sufficiency's the name of the game in military helicopters. And Turbomach's Titan® auxiliary power unit provides it in spades.

Every U. S. military production helicopter that's ever flown with an APU has had a Turbomach Titan on board. More than

4,000 Titans have provided reliable auxiliary power in over 5½ million hours of helicopter operation.

Titan is rugged. Dependable. Powerful. Everything the U.S. Army demands from its men and equipment, both. And Titan's tough in the battle of economics, too. Initial and operating costs are lean and trim.

Reliable Turbomach power. Helping the Blackhawk and Chinook get off the ground.

Lindbergh, Corpus Christi share "Top Chapter" honors; Valley View voted as "Best" in Europe

"What does a guy have to do to win?" That's what BG Jim Hesson, Lindbergh Chapter President, said when told his Chapter did not win the April '81-April '82 "Best Chapter Award."

His Lindbergh River Rats had held eight professional-social meetings in the awards period, had supported the National Convention activities with 17 Chapter members serving on the Convention Committee, and had upped their total membership by 247 to become the AAAA's second largest Chapter gaining 81% in the process.

A definite first!

The River Rats had even temporarily enrolled a canine, Asta Hilbert, as a $15 dues-paying member in the final weeks of the competition (later disallowed).

It was all to no avail . . . Everything they did was matched by the Corpus Christi Chapter who met monthly and won both membership contests (figures below). Hence, a subdued Jim Hesson, top photo left, accepts a "Top Chapter-'82" lectern seal from AAAA Senior VP MG Jim Smith, right, as Joe Guzman, of the Corpus Christi Chapter, just smiles in sharing the 1982 award.

Unbelievable!

When the AAAA developed its six-month Chapter Enrollment Competition in 1981, consideration was given to both large and small Chapters, and separate contests were arranged . . . a "Largest

It didn't work . . . The Corpus Christi Tex. Chapter, a medium-size activity at the start of the competition, won both categories.

Collins GPS User Systems:

The Force Enhancer

Collins Government Avionics and the Navstar Global Positioning System are powerful partners to increase U.S. and NATO military force effectiveness.

GPS increases the effectiveness of land, sea, and air forces dramatically. Air Force sponsored studies and field tests using GPS show success rates for tactical air missions are enhanced up to 60%, strategic weapons by 20% and indirect artillery by 50% by improved navigation. GPS is a survivable, all-weather, 24-hour, worldwide, jam-resistant system.

It all adds up to increased force effectiveness through advanced navigation technology for all users requiring highly accurate position, velocity and time information.

Collins GPS user systems make these advantages available through affordable GPS user equipment for air, sea, subsurface and surface applications. Our common modular architecture enables low acquisition and life-cycle-support costs for GPS user operations. Our modular design is the result of our long experience in ground, sea and airborne systems.

AAAA SPECIAL AWARD

IT'S a real honor and privilege to present this award to AVRADCOM's Applied Technology Laboratory. Someone might say that's somewhat incestuous. However, I had nothing to do with the selection.

The Laboratory has been known by a number of names over the years. Some of you may be old enough to recall at one time that it was known as TRECOM, and then AVLABS.

We had a hard time outliving the AVLABS name. They called it the Eustis Directorate of RTL for some time and then, finally, when we ran the AVRADCOM flag up in July of '77 at which time we decided to call it the Applied Technology Laboratory.

At this ceremony, I would like to recognize two former commanders who are present: MG Jack Klingenhagen and COL John Adie.

An R & D pioneer

I would say that ATL has pioneered much of our research and development — our advanced technology — particularly those two helicopters that we believe are the two finest in the world.

The BLACK HAWK and the APACHE certainly wouldn't be flying and living up to that category if it had not been for the work done by the Applied Technology Laboratory. They did research into maintainability, reliability, survivability, crashworthiness, crashworthy fuel cells, the T-700 engine — all those good things of which I know all of you are aware.

ATL has done a fine job over the years, and they're most worthy of recognition for this AAAA Special Award. The present commander is COL Emmett Knight is the present commander. If you would join me here, COL Knight, I'd like to read the citation that I think sums it all up.

CITATION

"The Applied Technology Laboratory, U.S. Army Research and Development Technology Laboratories, U.S. Army Aviation Research and Development Command, is hereby commended for exemplary service for over 25 years support to Army Aviation. Throughout this period, the Applied Technology Laboratory has played a lead role in the advancement of Army Aviation capability.

The research and development of Army Aviation systems has greatly benefited from the exploratory and advanced development programs completed at ATL. These efforts have resulted in significant advancement and improvements in Army aircraft, aircraft components, and support equipment.

The outstanding dedication of both the civilian and military personnel of ATL throughout the laboratory's history is well known in the Army Aviation community and reflects favorably upon the Research Technology Laboratories, AVRADCOM, and the United States Army."

Bell Helicopter Textron and the Boeing Vertol Company Announce JVX Teaming Agreement

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Bell Helicopter Textron, Inc., and Boeing Vertol Company announced a teaming agreement to participate in the Joint Services Advanced Vertical Lift Aircraft Program (JVX) competition.

The U.S. Government has indicated an intention to issue a Request for Proposal (RFP) for the design and development of a vertical lift aircraft for multi-service missions. The Bell-Boeing Team is expected to be a strong contender for this major development program.

The JVX Program is being formulated to provide a significant improvement in the vertical lift capabilities of all the military services. It would provide the Marine Corps with an urgently needed vertical assault transport; the Army with a new electronic warfare platform; the Navy and Air Force with a search and rescue capability; and the Air Force with a special operations aircraft.

The JVX would take advantage of advanced but mature and proven technologies such as Bell's XV-15 tilt rotor research aircraft and new composite structures. It would seek a substantial improvement over present VTOL capabilities in range, speed, economy, reliability, and in comfort level.

It is anticipated that the RFP will be released to industry in September of this year for a total design definition phase. Full scale engineering development will be authorized in late 1983 with first flight scheduled in 1986. Production deliveries would begin in the early 1990's.

The teaming agreement was signed by Bell President James F. Atkins and Boeing Vertol President Joseph Mallen.

AAAA Special Award

COL Emmett F. Knight, right, accepts the AAAA "Special Award" from MG Story C. Stevens, AVRADCOM Commander, on behalf of the personnel of the Applied Technology Laboratory, AVRADCOM, Ft. Eustis, Va.

Of course, it's a very great pleasure for me to accept this award in the name of the current and former members of the Applied Technology Laboratory.

There are several of both categories here tonight and I know that they, as well as I, take great pleasure in accepting this award. Not to mention the guys that are still back on the work benches in Virginia. We take great pride in this recognition by the AAAA.

ATL, of course, is an integral part of the Research and Technology Laboratories directed by Dr. Richard Carlson, and the Army Aviation Research and Development Command commanded by General Stevens, and DARCOM. And we very much appreciate the direction, guidance, and support of these commanders and their headquarters in the development and conduct of our share of the overall Army Aviation R & D mission.

I want to take this opportunity to thank them all publicly. We are all beneficiaries of the fine results that have emerged over the years from the R & D programs conducted by the Applied Technology Laboratory and its predecessors. And we in ATL plan to continue to strive for improved Army Aviation capability at reduced costs in our future efforts.

Thanks to the Association, and thanks to all of you. ■

One Lockheed breakthrough

A new one will

Their missions are separated by vertical miles of sky, but they're both Lockheed airborne breakthroughs designed to do vital jobs.

That speed and altitude champion, the unseen 2,000-plus-mph SR-71, streaks well above 80,000 feet, its sensors surveying some 100,000 square miles of terrain per hour. No other aircraft approaches its performance and records.

But, scheduled to be operational in the mid-1980s, the tiny Aquila artillery RPV has proved itself a breakthrough in target acquisition by hugging the ground. It's another case of Lockheed putting advanced technology to work, this time down low.

Aquila in action.

A speck of a bird—6 feet long with a 13-foot wingspan—Aquila gives ground forces faraway eyes in the skies. Packing highly advanced, jam-resistant electronics, it will send rear artillery observers real-time television views of the enemy situation. It will pinpoint targets, interfacing with TACFIRE to make firing effective on the first volleys. For laser-guided munitions, it will lock on with its laser designator to illuminate targets precisely. And later it will be equipped with FLIR for nighttime operations.

works out-of-sight.

The eagle-eyed survivor.

On a single sortie, Aquila can stay aloft for three hours, beelining or jinking at 110 mph, to locate targets and then assess damage.

Most important, it's an almost impossible target for the enemy. Through a long ordeal of tests, the small, nimble Aquila evaded deadly mixes of ground-fire. Not only does Aquila dodge ground-fire, it also doesn't generate enough heat for infrared weapons to home in on it.

And with mission completed, Aquila zips for home to be safely netted and readied for its next flight.

Answering the needs.

Aquila is indeed a breakthrough... a reconnaissance vehicle that can look down the enemy's throat... a system that will help get steel on target faster, more accurately than ever before.

Like its high-flying, unreachable cousin, the SR-71, Aquila is another example of Lockheed's using advanced technology to answer real needs and give our defenses a real edge.

THE 1982 AAAA
CONVENTION'S FIRST NIGHT
A Dinner at the
"Royal Dumpe"

Some 200 AAAA members and their spouses supped at a downtown St. Louis bistro on the Thursday night of the AAAA's four-day meeting, and were treated to "bawdy entertainment, strong beverages, and passable food."

Unfortunately for them, the "Dumpe" uses its dinner guests for the best part of the entertainment, putting selected guests in the stocks (Mrs. Emil Konopnicki, lower right photo; Jim Hesson, lower left and middle right photos) and not releasing either of them until they were bussed by a "White Knight" or a "virgin" respectively. This, of course, emptied all of the tables TWICE, some 90 men bussing Mrs. K, and General Jim getting kissed by all 90+ women present.

A King Henry VIII type (lower right) was M.C. while his "wenches" (top right) sang the bawdy ditties and served the slop . . . All in all, a loud, boisterous convention opener that proved to be a great "mixer" for those present.

CherryMAX — and one tool for Aircraft Battle Damage Repairs

The CherryMAX G-749 Hand Riveter. The newest weapon in the battle against battle damage.

Getting an aircraft back into combat doesn't leave much time for changing tools. That's why USAF specified the CherryMAX G-749 hand riveter for ABDR. Only one tool and one pulling head for 6 different rivet diameters and 3 head styles and all grip lengths. That kind of versatility cuts Mean Time-to-Repair and Mean Turn-Around Time dramatically— and increases aircraft availability. In combat that can be 90% of the battle.

For specification, use stock number N.S.N. 5120-01-089-1231

The flip side of St. Louis' AAAA 1982!

"It wasn't 'professionalism' all of the time. There were ample opportunities to have fun — particularly in the Chapter hospitality suites at night. I don't intend to miss another National."

With more than 70 exhibitors utilizing 128 booths, AAAA's 1982 Exhibit Hall was the twice-daily scene of full Convention "mixers." ## 1982 AAAA Product Support Symposium Called "Biggest!"

Almost 200 industry and military officials concerned with product support were in attendance at the '82 Product Support Symposium sponsored by the AAAA's Lindbergh (St. Louis) Chapter.

Held just before the 1982 AAAA Nat'l Convention in the Chase Park Plaza, the two-day gathering enabled conferees to take advantage of both assemblies.

The extensive programming covered contractor support of the training base and the maintenance base, as well as logistic support programs of the BLACK HAWK and APACHE aircraft systems.

With opening remarks by Donald F. Luce, the '82 Symposium Chairman and welcoming remarks by BG James M. Hesson, Lindbergh Chapter President, the professional sessions were MC'd and moderated once again to the enjoyment of all by Joseph P. Cribbins, ODCSLOG.

Why don't they . . . permit Army Aviators to wear badges on their green shirts?

Ever since the new light green shirt was introduced as an authorized item of the Army uniform, I have been absolutely amazed at the lack of comment by the magazine or its readers on the prohibition against wearing of the Army Aviation Badge on the shirt when worn as an outer garment.

Our sister services have equivalent items of uniform, but they are not denied the right to wear on them insignia identifying their skills and qualifications.

A singular prohibition

This inane Army prohibition applies only to the green shirt, and no such policy is in effect against the green blouse, dress blues, or fatigues. But since the green shirt is worn as an outer garment so much of the time, both in winter and summer, the ban seems to be a conscious effort to deprive rated personnel of an important part of their identity.

It leads one to believe that envy by those not authorized to wear such insignia, and who are in a position to prevent those authorized to do so, is the only reason for the ban, particularly since this ban is not in effect in the other services.

While the prohibition has no effect on one like the undersigned — I've been retired for many years, but am proud of having earned and worn the Liaison Pilot, Army Aviator, Senior Army Aviator, and Master Army Aviator Badges — I would like to suggest that the AAAA and its endorsed publication initiate a campaign to effect a change in the Army's uniform regulation.

One on one

It seems appropriate that one, and only one, badge be authorized for wear on the green shirt. It could be the Army Aviator, Aviation crewmember, combat infantry, parachute, or any other approved and authorized badge; but it should be one representing the skill or speciality in which the Army member is authorized to wear and a speciality in which the same member is currently serving.

There is no doubt that, if implemented, this proposed change will be welcomed by those whom it affects, and will benefit the Army by significantly increasing the morale and pride of those no longer forced to hide their hard-earned qualification.

THE SOLID COMPONENT

sorb the volunteers beyond the 100% authorization level. Within the past year the aviator strength of USAR units has increased by 28%.

A range of varied training opportunities permits the continuation of an aviation career by conscientious citizens who want to do their part in preserving world peace while pursuing civilian careers.

The level of individual aviator skills within USAR aviation units compares favorably with the skill level of active duty aviators. The resulting capability of Army Reserve aviation units provides an invaluable mobilization asset in the event of a national emergency.

The ability of units such as the 190th Aviation Company (MH)—erroneously labeled an ARNG unit in the "Outstanding Reserve Component Unit Award" section of the April issue—to complement the active force structure contributes significantly to an affordable defense.

The company's east coast Ft. Meade detachment is considered to be the best Logistics Across the Shore (LATS) aviation team in the Army force structure.

In a world of escalating defense costs, the lower overhead cost of the Reserve Components is becoming an increasingly important factor in the balance of power. The U.S. Army Reserve is proud of its aviation community and its contribution to the 'Economy of the Force'.
