AH-64A

APACHE...

Combat Effective . . . Efficient

The AH-64A APACHE provides the field commander with an invaluable asset . . . efficiency.

The APACHE's efficiency comes from . . . its ability to engage the enemy when and where the commander wants . . .

From . . . its ability to carry a full combat load of HELIFIRE missiles and 30mm ammunition at high altitudes and in hot weather.

From . . . its ability, as a sophisticated weapons system to provide a substantial reduction in maintenance-man-hours per-flight-hour over any comparable anti-armor helicopter, thereby significantly reducing operating and support costs.

A closer look at the Army's new vision:

From the beginning, Bell has been confident that innovative engineering, proven performance records and systematic planning would help provide new eyes for the Army — a near term scout that will outperform all contemporary helicopters. And now there's proof.

Bell looks forward to delivering the modern, advanced technology Near Term Scout Helicopter. Bell's multi-mission system 406. Take a look at what's ahead.

For more information on Bell's progress write to Ray Swindell, Director, U.S. Government Marketing, Bell Helicopter Textron Inc., Dept 680, Box 482, Ft. Worth, Texas 76101.

BELL LOOKS AHEAD TO DELIVERY.

Let's communicate!

WHAT with the two most recent issues of this magazine being devoted editorially to the UH-60 BLACK HAWK and the AH-64 APACHE, I haven't had the opportunity to address you on the many other aviation matters that concern the DA Aviation Officer.

It's my intention, as my predecessors have done, to update you frequently in this publication in these very areas, and to reconfirm to you that there are many persons, both rated and non-rated, who work on a wide variety of aviation matters on a daily basis. I know you are aware of this; I merely wish to restate the fact.

Opening two way communications is most desirable, and I welcome feedback from you on any subject.*

The hardware

The hardware outlook changes monthly, and I'll review the highlights of the fielded systems, those that are coming on board, and those that are ahead in the future.

● UH-60A BLACK HAWK. Fielding continued at the rate of around 100 aircraft per year. At the end of FY 82, 321 aircraft had been distributed to CONUS units. We now look ahead this year to fielding in USAREUR and next year in Korea.

A near-term improvement planned for the BLACK HAWK is the External Stores Support (ESSS), which will add extended range and improved tactical deployability to the already outstanding capabilities of this aircraft.

● CH-47D CHINOOK. The first of 436 new "D" models is scheduled for delivery to its new unit in March 1983. Deliveries will continue over the next five years.

● AH-1S COBRA. Fielding of the fully modernized AH-1S to USAREUR continues, and is now approximately 60% complete. The Army continues to evaluate a variety of options to upgrade the older AH-1 models and to extend their life to the year 2,000.

● AH-64 APACHE. The AH-64 is the Army's top priority aviation program, and has recently completed an extensive developmental flight test program of over 4,000 hours. Work effort on the initial aircraft is on or ahead of schedule.

The new assembly facility at Mesa, AZ, will be occupied in December 1982, two months ahead of schedule. The first aircraft will begin movement down the assembly line in March 1983 with the first of 515 production APACHE aircraft being delivered to the Army in February 1984.

● AHIP. Our near term improved Scout aircraft is expected to begin entering the inventory in FY 86. Priority of distribution of the aircraft will be to modernized attack units. Operational testing is scheduled to begin in September 1984 at Hunter-Liggett, CA.

• JVX. All of the services are proceeding with the Joint Services Advanced Vertical Lift Aircraft (JVX) program. Current requirements call for joint development of a multi-mission aircraft for the 1990's and beyond.

The aircraft is expected to employ tilt-rotor technology in performing such missions as airborne intelligence and electronic warfare, medical evacuation, search and rescue, special operations, and assault vertical lift. The Army is designated the executive service for the joint program.

• Light Helicopter Experimental (LHX). Advanced technology development programs continue for a light helicopter to eventually replace the AH-1 and a light utility version to eventually replace the UH-1 and OH-58.

These programs seek to take advantage of advanced composite airframe technology, digital optical control systems (fly by light) and an integrated technology rotor program in an effort to achieve speed, lightweight, and survivability.

• Simulators. The Army's simulator program continues, with a wide range of simulators scheduled for fielding throughout the 1980's. (See the fielding chart on the next page.)

Training and Standardization

• The annual Aviation Training Symposium and Policy Committee meeting was held this month at Fort Rucker, AL. The theme of this year's meeting was a review of the entire Aircrew Training Manual program. Highlights of the results of this review will be published in the near future.

• The new AR 95-1, dated 15 November 1982, has been printed and is now being distributed to the field. Considerable effort has gone into the rewrite of this regulation, which should prove helpful to all concerned. Note especially the section on operational support airlift, which is completely new this year.

Personnel

• The next Engineering Test Pilot Selection Board will convene at the Military Personnel Center in January 1983. DA Circular 351-83, "Army Aviation Engineering Test Pilot Program" has been revised and the new one should hit the field in November. It provides general information as well as detailed application procedures.

Those readers whose applications have been held for future boards must update their application not later than 15 December 1982, which is also the ad-

Selection Process

Selection of Army Aviators for participation in the program is made by an annual Officer Personnel Management Directorate (OPMD) board. Board members are drawn from the U.S. Army Aviation Engineering Flight Activity (USAAEFA), the U.S. Army Aviation Development Test Activity (USAADTA), the U.S. Naval Test Pilot School (USNTPS), the OPMD Combat Arms Division, the OPMD Combat Service Support Division, and the OPMD Warrant Officer Division.

Only those applications of officers who are recommended by their respective career divisions are considered.

Once selected, and prior to attending the NTPS, officers are sent TDY to the Army Test Pilot Orientation Course at USAAEFA, Edwards AFB, CA. This eight-week course is designed to provide academic and flight refresher training. Academic subjects include college math through calculus, physics, aerodynamics, mechanics, and technical report writing.

Flight orientation includes high altitude environment training, flight test techniques, and familiarization in a number of aircraft used at NTPS. NTPS classes begin semi-annually, in January and July. The Army's training quota is nine per year; however, the number of officers trained is a function of requirements.

Upon successful completion of the NTPS, graduates are assigned to the U.S. Army Aviation Research and Development Command (AVRAD-COM) or USAADTA, Fort Rucker, AL as engineering test pilots.

Prerequisites

- Active duty Army Aviators in the grade of major and below may apply.

- Must hold pilot status code 1 and either SC-15, 67J, 71, or MOS 100 series.

- Must be dual rated with a minimum of 1,000 hours military flight time.

- Must possess current instrument certificate.

- Must be a competent swimmer.

- Must have completed college algebra, physics, and calculus with above average grades.

- Experience in complex aircraft such as the CH-47, UH-60, AH-64, or OV-10 is highly desirable.

Aviation "Gates"

The Army has been under the "gate" system established by the Aviation Career Incentive Act for eight years now. With the changes in aviator management that have taken place in the last few years, it is interesting to see how aviators stand in relationship to their 12 and 18 year gates.

Shown here are the number of aviators who were eligible for and who met their gate requirements during FY 82:

Garrett turbine power: More fight for the Army's helicopters.

When it comes to getting a helicopter into action and keeping it there, the Army can depend on Garrett gas turbines to lead the way.

Helicopter APU's: The new AH-64A Apache is one of the most lethal attack helicopters in the sky. And Garrett's Model 36—the lightest, most fuel-efficient APU in its class—is the heart of the AH-64A's Integrated Pneumatic System, a design concept which reduces both the size and weight of the engine start and environmental control systems.

The Model 36 is a prime APU candidate for other new or retrofit helicopter programs.

What's more our Model 36 can also bring self-sufficiency to helicopters which employ DC starting.

Aviation Ground Power Unit (AGPU):

Currently being tested by the Army, the Garrett/Libby International turbine-powered AGPU is a small, versatile helicopter ground support cart which is sling-transportable by the UH-1H. Ready for production, the AGPU, powered by the Model 36 gas turbine, provides pneumatic, AC, DC, and hydraulic power for ground checkout or starting. In addition, it is self-propelled for helicopter towing.

Turbine-Powered Pumpers:

Garrett is also developing a sling-transportable fuel pumper, powered by the Model 30 gas turbine, with 200 to 600 gpm operation and highly reliable starting capability down to -65°F. Now being evaluated as part of the Army's forward area refueling and bulk transfer program for the Arctic, Garrett's Model 30-powered fuel pumper can add range, flexibility, and reliability to any type of mobile fighting system.

Warrant Officer Aviator Management

Since aviator management in Warrant Officer Division changed from an "area" system to a "specialty" system in January 1981, we have seen considerable improvement in how aviators are trained and assigned to meet Army requirements worldwide. Warrant Officer aviators should also know who their assignment managers are and how to contact them:

It is encouraging to see that our warrant officer aviator retention (at the end of the first obligated tour) has increased from 45% in FY 79 to 60% in FY 82. The whole aviation community has actively identified and pushed for implementation of many initiatives to improve the aviation program.

It is obvious that these efforts have paid off. Now we all need to "advertise" the improvements. One way to do this is to be aware of these sharp soldiers who work for us and encourage them to consider the challenges of becoming an Army aviator through the Warrant Officer Candidate program.

Safety

The Army's formal aviation accident prevention effort has, over the past twenty years, met with considerable success as evidenced by a continuing drop in the accident rate per 100,000 flying hours from 54.3 in FY 58 to 2.31 in FY 80.

However, statistics for the past two years indicated an undesirable upward trend. FY 82 was the worst in several years. During FY 82, 70% of all Class A aviation accidents were caused by human error. Crew and supervisory error contributed to 80% of the human error accidents. Our aviation accident experience for the last six years appears in the accompanying table. It is incumbent on all of us to reverse the trend for FY 83.

We are beginning to make good progress on getting our CH-47 fleet back into service. There are operational aircraft now in every MACOM, and within the very near future we expect to reach an intermediate goal of two aircraft operational in every CH-47 company. It has taken the total support of the total "aviation team" to identify the problem, work out the solution, and get the effort underway in the field.

We have recently formed a Safety Coordinating Committee at Department of the Army under sponsorship of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel. Membership includes key aviation managers from all Army Staff agencies. This committee was formed to facilitate timely staff actions at Department of Army level relating to the Army's accident prevention program and to serve as a forum to communicate the emphasis placed on safety by the top leaders in the Army.

The committee is chaired by MG John H. Mitchell from ODCS PER, and includes Mr. Joe Cribbins (ODCS-LOG), BG Richard D. Kenyon (ODCS-RDA), myself, and a representative of the Office of the Surgeon General.

Reserve Components

• Army National Guard (ARNG). Recent decisions by the ARNG will significantly change their attack helicopter program. AH-1 aircraft will be redistributed to attack helicopter companies and troops by model, to preclude having a mix of different models in the same unit. To achieve maximum training and readiness capability, aircraft fill for each unit will be reduced from 21 to 15. The UH-1M/C gunships now in these units will become the basic aircraft of the air cavalry troops only. To support their new program, the ARNG has developed a phased training program to get the right mix of qualified aviators in each unit.

• Army Reserve (USAR). The USAR and FORSCOM have begun a test of the recently developed Battle Rostering program. Battle Rostering involves the designation of individual ready reserve aviators to a specific aviation unit as an Individual Mobilization Augmentee (IMA). The active component unit is responsible to train each of their IMA aviators to the same level as their assigned aviators. The goal of the program is to bring each CONUS aviation unit up to ALO 1. Battle Rostering will be tested at Forts Stewart, Hood, Bragg, and Lewis this year.

The Chinook D... rolling into the future.

The new generation Chinook helicopter is ready to serve the Army for another generation. Initial production CH-47Ds have been delivered on time, on cost, and are exceeding all technical requirements. Army plans are to modernize 436 Chinooks to new D-model specifications.

To keep 'em coming, new production machinery, modernized facilities and a skilled production force are now ready to meet the Army's planned production of five of these workhorse CH-47D helicopters every month.

From the fuselage out, it's a new aircraft, with new engines and transmissions, fiberglass rotor blades, and new state-of-the-art electrical, hydraulic, and avionic systems. The new CH-47D will give field commanders increased capacity, increased performance, and increased reliability to handle fast-response needs better than ever.

The new Ds are rolling to help keep the Army ready... ready to meet the challenges of today, and of the future. And working in partnership with the Army, Boeing Vertol will help keep it that way.

Nominees sought for 1983 Induction to the "Army Aviation Hall of Fame"

The Background: An AAAA-sponsored "Army Aviation Hall of Fame" honors those persons who have made an outstanding contribution to Army Aviation, and records the excellence of their achievements for posterity.

The "Hall of Fame" is located at Fort Rucker in the Army Aviation Museum where the portraits and narratives of each inductee are displayed in a distinctive location. The costs of the program — selection, induction, portraiture, etc. are underwritten by the AAAA.

ELIGIBILITY: Anyone may nominate a candidate for the "Hall of Fame." All persons are eligible for induction, except AD military personnel. Civilian personnel are eligible prior to their retirement.

Nominations should be submitted before 31 December 1982 to the AAAA, 1 Crestwood Road, Westport, CT 06880, and include:

(1) The nominee's full name and address.

(2) A 90-100 word summary of the achievement(s) for which the candidate is being nominated to the "Army Aviation Hall of Fame".

(3) A current photograph of the nominee, if living, or information as to where such a photo or photos may be obtained.

TO: AAAA, 1 Crestwood Road, Westport, CT 06880

I'd like to nominate the following persons as candidates for induction into the "Army Aviation Hall of Fame" in April, 1983. On separate sheets, I've enclosed their full names, a brief 90-100 word summary of their achievements, and a photograph of each, where available. (Please print).

A graphic design featuring three identical stylized wings, each with five fingers and fine lines representing feathers. Above each wing is a five-pointed star. The wings are arranged vertically, with one at the top, one in the middle, and one at the bottom. All elements are rendered in a dark teal or black color on a light teal background.

The "1982 Who's Who" may be used as a reference manual by removing the top and bottom staples in the issue's centerfold.

Garrett military propulsion: anticipating the future.

At Garrett, we're working on an innovative modern technology engine which is a prime candidate for the U.S. Army's MTDE program. This fuel-efficient, 5000 shp engine is designed to power many of tomorrow's most advanced military aircraft.

Our planning for the future has already paid off in the selection of Garrett engines to power the USAF's T-46A. And we're working with the USAF to develop a Garrett advanced gas generator.

What's more, with over 20,000 Garrett gas turbines in the military inventory, we're experienced with the military's Integrated Logistics Support requirements.

Write: Military Propulsion Sales Manager, Garrett Turbine Engine Company, P.O. Box 5217, Phoenix, AZ 85010. (602) 267-4035.

The eagle

The new Aquila

On July 16, an amazing bird winged through the skies at an Army test site.

It was the tiny Aquila artillery RPV, first full-scale development article to be flown. A Lockheed test team successfully put Aquila through the first of a rigorous series of test flights and safe returns to its landing net.

The tests of the full-scale development Aquila follow an earlier systems demonstration program of a total of 218 flights, 150 of them flown by U.S. Army soldiers under real-world conditions.

An eye on the action.

Aquila (Latin for "eagle") is a breakthrough that will give Army ground forces an upper hand in observation and target acquisition.

Just six feet long with a 13-foot wingspan, an Aquila will fly sorties of up to three hours each. It will pack advanced, jam-resistant electronics and will send real-time television views of the enemy situation to ground stations. It will pinpoint targets, interfacing with TACFIRE to make firing effective on first volleys.

To aid laser-guided munitions, Aquila will use its laser designator to illuminate targets precisely. And Aquila can also carry other tactical payloads for nighttime operations and other missions.

Making the bird even better.

The tests are proving the design that will make Aquila a great advance in target acquisition/reconnaissance. It will help Army artillery get steel on target faster, more accurately than ever before.

It's another example of Lockheed's using advanced technology to give our defenses a real edge.

QRC Avionics Service

The AEL Service Division. A lean, flexible Quick Reaction Capability for installation, modification, testing and repair of electronic/equipment/systems for rotary and fixed wing aircraft.

A proven source for Avionics Service, the AEL Service Division offers specialized facilities and skilled personnel with extensive experience in meeting stringent cost and delivery schedules in military avionics programs. These facilities include two large hangars adjacent to a 7,000 foot runway. Three solid panel shielded enclosures for EMI/EMC testing. And machine and metal shops.

AEL Service Division Capabilities

- Installation Engineering
- Kit Fabrication
- Installation/Integration
- Verification and Ancillary Testing

SCIENCE/SCOPE

A new mast-mounted sight for helicopters, which lets a gunner fire TOW antitank missiles while the helicopter hides behind hills or trees, is designed to accommodate various improvements. The sight was developed by Hughes for use with the airborne TOW (Tube-launched, Optically tracked, Wire-guided) missile system. Its design allows for future installation of a laser rangefinder, an automatic target tracker, and a forward-looking infrared (FLIR) night vision system.

The sight has been mounted on a Hughes Helicopters 500MD Defender to improve the helicopter's ability to avoid radar and visual detection while scouting for targets and shooting at them. (Hughes Aircraft Company and Hughes Helicopters, though both founded by the late Howard Hughes, are two separate companies.)

A fiber-optic communications system may lead to an antiarmor missile whose many advantages include firing without being exposed to enemy counterfire and locking on a target after launch. The concept calls for a missile with an imaging seeker to relay signals to the gunner over a glass thread that pays out as the missile flies. The gunner would select and acquire a target which he sees on a TV screen.

The system would be low in cost because most data processing is done at the launcher. Hughes and principal subcontractor ITT Electro-Optical Products Division are developing the Integrated Fiber-Optic Communications Link for the U.S. Army.

KING RADIO. SHEDDING WORN NOTIONS FOR FRESH IDEAS.

Traditionally, mil spec avionics have always been used in military aircraft. ■ But does it make sense to always use expensive mil spec equipment in aircraft that, quite frankly, may never be used in a mil spec or combat environment? ■ The U.S. Navy didn't think so. That's why they have equipped their new Bell TH-57A Training Helicopters with an off-the-shelf system of superbly reliable and cost effective King Radio equipment. ■ Avionics including capabilities such as our unique TACAN/RNAV system. Its 10-waypoint offset capability allows Navy pilots to conduct training over a large area, free of dangerous congestion. ■ And, our commercial transponder system with its push-button emergency squawk capability that simplifies operation and provides increased safety. ■ Give us your special program. We'll see that it gets some fresh ideas. Write or call Dan Rodgers, Special Programs Department, King Radio Corporation, 400 North Rogers Road, Olathe, Kansas 66062. (800) 255-6243.
