ACAP, the world's first all-composite helicopter airframe, takes its first flight.

Under the Advanced Composite Airframe Program (ACAP), commissioned by the U.S. Army's Applied Technology Laboratory, Sikorsky Aircraft designed and built the first helicopter with an all-composite airframe. On August 16, 1984, it flew for the first time.

Advanced composites will be vital to the success of the Army's next family of light helicopters, LHX. They will make it lighter and faster. More crashworthy. Harder to detect. Easier to maintain. They will give it greater ballistics tolerance, and bring down the cost of production as well.

Sikorsky has already produced over 500,000 composite parts at rates up to 13,000 a month. Experience no one can match. Applied with foresight and skill, it will make LHX what it has to be. A potent and powerful force on the battlefield of tomorrow.

JOINT STARS

ON SEPTEMBER 2, 1982, WE GAVE YOU THE BEST REASON TO GIVE THE GRUMMAN TEAM
THE GO-AHEAD.

In combat, time is of the essence. Winning or losing can hinge on the real-time detection and attack of advancing armor.

Battle action like this demands Joint STARS—the Air Force/Army Surveillance and Target Attack Radar System. It's a technology developed and successfully tested by the Grumman team.

That September, Grumman's Pave Mover radar successfully tracked moving tanks and guided a missile to the targets, using a technology required by Joint STARS.

We're ready to do it again. The Grumman team brings to the Joint STARS project outstanding credentials. Norden is one of the nation's foremost radar systems designers. And Grumman is a leading integrator of avionics systems.

But the biggest advantage: demonstrated technology and "off-the-shelf" software that will save the Air Force and Army a lot of time. And money.

Now the commitment is greater than ever

This is the new Hughes Helicopters at Mesa, Arizona, where work begins on a masterplan that calls for an additional 1.3 million square feet of factory, laboratory and office space.

Included is a giant 340,000-square-foot Advanced Development Center. It is to be completed by mid-1986 and consists of engineering laboratories, simulation facilities and prototype assembly.

As Hughes Helicopters' work in support of the U.S. Army's LHX Program moves toward full mission simulation, the company is more committed than ever to meeting the biggest challenge in the history of rotorcraft. That challenge is the development of a new family of helicopters to support Army 21. A new and technologically advanced generation of rotorcraft that could help the Army fight and win on a battlefield of the 21st century.

The Hughes commitment is more than a matter of facilities. It is people. It is dedication. It is belief in the Hughes LHX Team effort. It is a commitment that is greater than ever.

Advancing RPV Technology

It sees behind hills, around corners, and down the enemy's throat.

Obscured by terrain, enemy forces are massing for an attack.

But the small Army/Lockheed Aquila RPV already has their number, as well as their precise location. Jinking and maneuvering to avoid hostile fire, it transmits the information over a real-time television link. Now air and artillery know precisely where to attack.

When it becomes operational, Aquila will benefit a battle commander in many ways—from target acquisition to ELINT. It interfaces with TACFIRE to direct first volleys with pinpoint accuracy, while its laser designator illuminates the targets of laser-guided munitions. All for only a fraction of the cost of a high-performance aircraft with its irreplaceable crew.

Aquila's mission flexibility also will give a commander other options. It can be a radio relay for communications, a meteorological sensor, as well as an ELINT collector or a communications jammer. And with FLIR on board, Aquila becomes the night flier that gives the enemy no rest.

Aquila's tiny 13-foot wingspan and 110-mph speed make it an almost impossible target for hostile birdwatchers. It can beeline, loiter, and jink for up to three hours. Its survivability has been demonstrated in a trial by fire against a deadly mix of weapons.

When the job is done, Aquila flies back home to its retrieval net, ready to be prepared for a new mission.

Aquila. The tough, affordable flier that extends a battle commander's reach right to the enemy's front door.

AN UPDATE FROM ODCSOPS

BY BRIGADIER GENERAL WAYNE KNUDSON
AVIATION OFFICER, ODCSOPS, DA

THIS month's issue includes articles by MG Carl H. McNair, Jr., Deputy Chief of Staff for Combat Developments, US Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC), and by COL Willis R. "Bob" Bunting, Chief of the Warrant Officer Division at MILPERCEN.

Both articles provide up-to-date information on topics not recently addressed by this publication. MG McNair's "Aviation in an Army of Excellence" discusses aviation force development beginning with the Vietnam era and leads to Aviation Force Design for the Light Division. COL Bunting's "Warrant Officers in the Aviation Branch" gives us a detailed look at Aviation Warrant Officer management yesterday, today and tomorrow.

Studies

MAX FLY. The HQDA chartered, Max Fly Off Force Development Test and Experimentation (FDT&E) will be a field test to determine maximum operating tempo, in terms of flying hours, per aircraft per day, that a unit can sustain for 30, 60, and 90 day periods when configured in the Army of Excellence (AOE) structure. Max Fly will evaluate operating tempos in CH-47D, AH-1S and UH-60A units by considering not only aircraft as a limiting factor but related issues as well. These include TOE personnel authorizations, TOE equipment authorizations, TOE equipment authorizations (less aircraft), diminishing PLL stockage and diminishing ASL stockage. Although similar studies in the past have examined some of these factors, there is a need to confirm operating tempos at the unit level.

ARCOSA IV. The last comprehensive aviation requirements study, Aviation Requirements for the Combat Structure of the Army (ARC SA) III, was completed in 1976 and updated in 1981. The ARCOSA IV study was initiated by TRADOC in May, 1983. The study team examined aviation tables of distribution and allowances (TDA) and a compilation of Army Aviation TOE force structure designs for the 1986 through 1990 time frame. The overall goal is to conserve and best utilize our scarce aviation resources, especially personnel. To that end, the study is expected to recommend standardizing some installation airfields and civilianizing some functions. Final study recommendations are due at HQDA in January for staffing.

AAMP. The February 1983 Army Aviation Modernization Plan (AAMP) is under revision and, when published in the Spring of 1985, will give us an updated base line of data for aviation planning.

Ongoing work

AHIP testing. In the September issue, I discussed AHIP developmental and operational testing. Since then, a question on the correct mix of scout and attack has surfaced. It was decided to modify the AHIP OT II test with additional testing. Dubbed "the Scout/Attack Mix experiment" it matches teams of helicopters having a fixed number of AHIP, or no AHIP, against teams with fewer scouts than the current three scout/five attack doctrinal mix.

The goal of the experiment is to provide insight into the force mix issue. The experiment is not the answer to the Scout/Attack force issue but rather an initial look. It should provide useful information which can be used as the base-line for any future force structure testing.

Agusta Aircraft. The U.S. Army is purchasing 11 CH-47 aircraft from Agusta of Italy. Although not manufactured to US CH-47C specifications, the Agusta aircraft are very similar and will be converted to US standards prior to issue. Current plans are to issue the eleven aircraft to the Pennsylvania Army National Guard. These aircraft incorporate state-of-the-art technology and will greatly improve the mission capability of the PA ARNG.

Other news

Training award. The Link Flight Simulation Division of The Singer Company is now sponsoring an AAAA "Trainer of the Year Award." The first presentation of this award will be held on 4 December 1984 at Ft. Rucker, AL, and will recognize SFC Walter D. Smith for his outstanding contribution to Army Aviation training during calendar year 1984. SFC Smith is with the Basic Technical Division, Department of NCO Training, US Army Aviation Logistics School, Ft. Eustis, VA.

Congratulations, SFC Smith!

OCAR Aviation Section. The Office of the Chief, Army Reserve (OCAR) has implemented functional staff changes to enhance USAR Aviation proponentcy. In July 1984, the Training Division, DAAR-TR, was functionally reorganized to include an Aviation Section. The mission of the Aviation Section is to serve as the foundation for the development of USAR aviation policy, procedure, plans, and programs for OCAR; to provide a centralized point of contact (POC) for all matters involving USAR aviation for coordination with the Army Staff, MACOMs, and other staff agencies as necessary; to serve as the principle advisor to the Chief, Army Reserve, on all Army Aviation matters; and to provide coordination between all divisions in OCAR for USAR aviation matters.

Telephone numbers are: OCAR Aviation Officer, AV 225-0877; Aviation Programs Analyst, AV 225-0877; Aviation FMF Staff Officer, AV 225-3685 or 227-5532; Aviation Logistics Staff Officer, AV 227-9803/9672; and Aviation Staff Officer, AV 225-0877.

CMF 28. Since formation of the Aviation Branch, the Commander, TRADOC, directed the centralization of aviation proponent responsibilities at the Aviation Center, Ft. Rucker, AL. Prior to this decision, CMF 28 personnel were members of the Signal Corps and were considered members of the Signal Branch. However, the duties they performed related more to aviation activities than to those of signal. The TRADOC CMF 28 Review Group proposed an implementation plan which was approved and will include the following actions:

- Assign full proponentcy of MOS 26E and 26F from USASC & Ft. Gordon to USAICS and place under CMF 33 as MOS 33V.

- Transfer MOS 35K, 35L, 35M, 35P, and 35R from USASC & Ft. Gordon to USAAVNC and place under CMF 67.

- Transfer MOS 26D from USASC & Ft. Gordon to USAAVNC and then re-designate as MOS 93D under CMF 93.

- Delete MOS 26K.

- Delete ASI W6.

— W6 Training, minus those Special Electronic Mission Aircraft (SEMA) items that are SEMA peculiar, will be given to all 35K and 35R personnel during their initial MOS training.

— SEMA peculiar duties will be given to MOS 26E with training to take place in the initial MOS training.

Although proponentcy transfer is expected by January 1985, TRADOC expects no sudden personnel changes at its schools and centers. Any transfer of mission or personnel from current locations will be done only after thorough planning and review.

Plan ahead

By the time you read this, planning will be well under way for the 1985 AAAA National Convention in St. Louis, MO, at the Cervantes Convention Center and the Sheraton St. Louis during March 28-31. As we look ahead to the convention, please note the centerfold advance registration form in this issue. Mark your calendars and make plans to be there!!

AVIATION IN AN "ARMY OF EXCELLENCE"

BY MG CARL H. MCNAIR, JR., AND ROBERT G. DODD

WHY is the Army now involved in another very significant effort to realign the Army's force structure? How will this Army restructuring affect Army Aviation? What is the future outlook for Army Aviation units in the Army of Excellence (AOE) force design?

These are all very crucial questions as they affect the Army and more specifically, Army Aviation. To fully appreciate the evolution of the AOE force design it is most appropriate to briefly review the past two decades relative to the Army's mission requirements and its contributions to our national defense.

Coming of age

During the early 1960's, through the early 1970's, the Vietnam conflict dominated the Army's mission. Although our nation very carefully and conscientiously met our other international and national commitments, its major focus was Southeast Asia. This conflict required the Army to adapt to a very unique style of fighting. The Vietnam War turned out to be an ideal environment for Army Aviation and, more specifically, the helicopter to truly come of age. Army Aviation was given a wide range of very crucial missions during this conflict. By any measure, those missions were accomplished very competently and professionally.

As this effort was scaling down, the Army leadership of the early 1970's again refocused attention to a much broader worldwide perspective. This leadership realized that the Army badly needed new, modernized equipment. Modernization was essential to meet these worldwide commitments and to replace the many old and obsolete weapons in the force. Also, this leadership recognized that the Warsaw Pact forces had been involved in a very massive buildup of their conventional forces, both in quality and in quantity. Thus the Army embarked upon the very serious job of force modernization. The "big five," — the M-1 tank, the M-2 infantry fighting vehicle, UH-60 BLACK HAWK helicopter, the AH-64 APACHE helicopter, and the Patriot missile programs — were all initiated along with scores of other very critical equipment upgrades. By the late '70s and early '80s, all of these new, very capable systems were entering the Army's force.

The Division 86 force structure was designed around the integration of these weapon systems into our force. The objective was to design a force capable of engaging the Soviet bloc threat head-on; to fight outnumbered and still win on a very lethal, complex battlefield. Although this modernization strategy was sound, Army tacticians, along with close coordination with our sister services, had looked at other alternatives of fighting this central European type of battle.

A viable approach

AirLand Battle doctrine — the simultaneous and synchronized engagement of the threat in the close, near and deep battle — provided a much more viable approach to defeating this massive threat. This doctrine takes full advantage of the synergistic effect of these new weapons systems. The intent is to deny the enemy the luxury of conducting a very complex, multi-echelon attack against allied forces by inflicting serious losses or disruption of these follow-on echelon forces before they arrive at the battle area. Thus, the enemy's combat capability will be drastically reduced prior to their engagement in the close in battle at the Forward Line of Troops (FLOT).

As the Army's leadership reviewed the Army's posture, they recognized that this new doctrine and force modernization effort would provide the Army a much improved capability to meet this very serious threat. However, a more detailed review also identified two other major factors. First, while our forces were becoming more capable, they were also becoming very heavy. This heaviness seriously impacts our ability to rapidly deploy these forces to a combat zone. Secondly, it was recognized that this nation has many widely changing worldwide commitments.

A variable threat

Figure 1 graphically portrays a simplified global threat assessment. Although being prepared to face a Soviet bloc force in a major conventional battle is one of this nation's most serious defense objectives, it is more likely that our Army will face a much less capable force in one of many locations around the world. In reality, there are many potential hot spots throughout the Middle East, Africa, the Caribbean, and Latin America, that may require a military response. The Army must be prepared to defend our nation's interest in these areas or provide a stabilizing influence. Although the rapid deployment force (RDF) is designed to be the nation's first presence in many of these conflicts, it would likely require rapid reinforcement to sustain its combat capability. Also, it is very possible that at some point in time this country could be faced with several potential conflicts simultaneously.

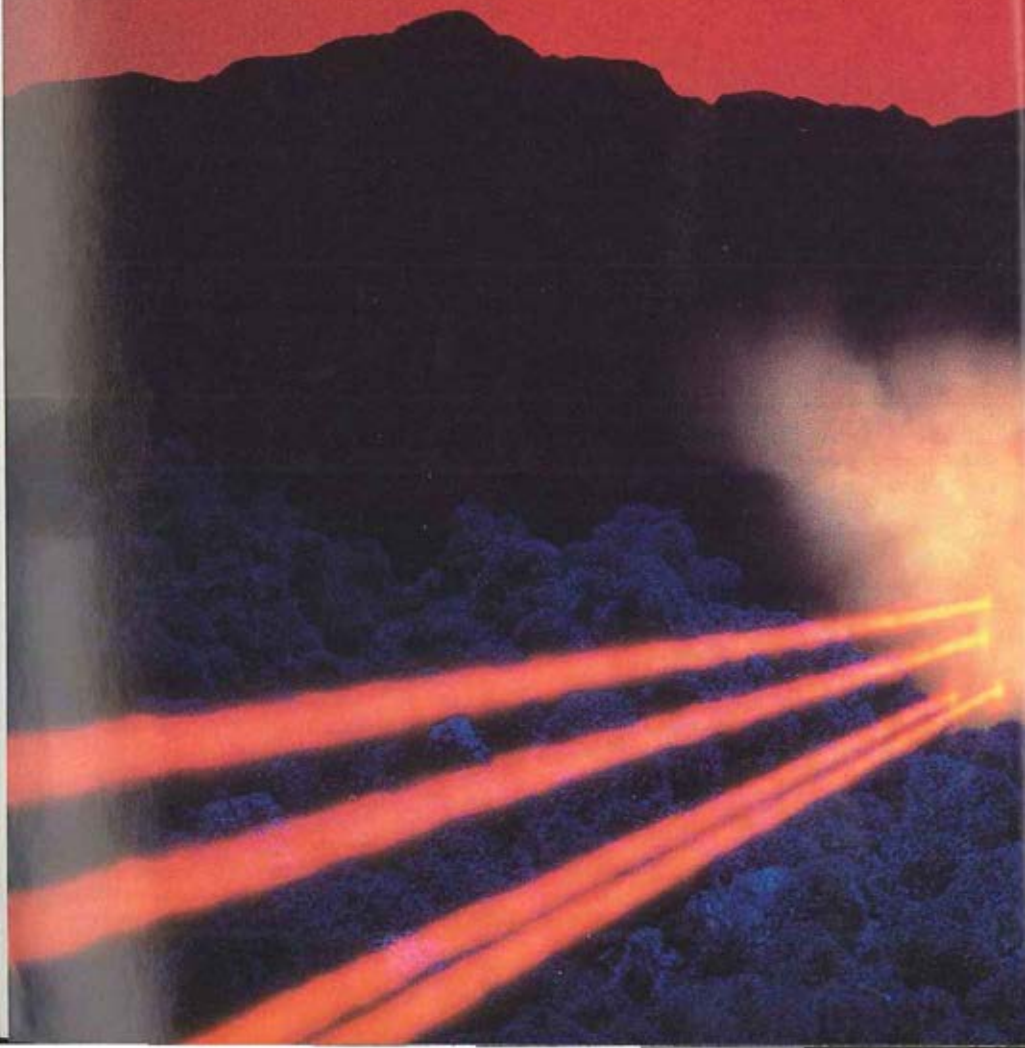

In response, the Chief of Staff of the Army tasked the Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) in July, 1983, to review the Army's force structure and force design and provide recommendations on how to develop a force that can meet our worldwide commitments by taking maximum advantage of the Army's highly skilled and dedicated personnel and the new equipment currently being fielded. These commitments could range from low level terrorist or guerrilla activity in an underdeveloped country up to a major conventional or nuclear war in Europe or Korea.

A new concept

TRADOC's response to the Army Chief of Staff was the "Army of Excellence" (AOE). The fundamental precepts underlying Division 86 were retained insofar as possible, while reducing unit size and, in the case of the light division, dramatically reducing equipment weight. TRADOC recognized that the Army cannot get increased combat power by simply reducing the size of an AOE division. A substantial portion of the division tail and some of its fighting capability was moved back to corps; but, not on a one-for-one basis. Thus, the concept of "corps plugs" was developed. When an Army force is engaged in a specific contingency, a committed division could then receive some or even all of the corps resources — or "plugs" — depending on the situation. Thus, while engaged in small scale contingencies, the division or corps commander can apply the combat forces required for the job at hand — and get the initial division forces there quickly. Follow-up forces — more armor, aviation, air defense, or support forces — can be provided depending upon the tactical situation and the threat.

How it works

Figure 2 illustrates this concept. The basic division has organic troop elements with staff elements into which the corps elements will "plug" to provide the division the robustness and resiliency in that specific mission area — such as aviation. Each of the corps will have a corps aviation brigade to perform that function. One can appreciate that in reducing a 17,000 man division (hardly deployable by air) to a 10,000 man division (easily air-deployable in 400-500 sorties) the competition for manpower spaces and C-141 sorties was keen. It speaks to the importance of Army Aviation that the AOE force design retained the combat aviation brigade (CAB) in both the heavy and the light divisions.

In the light division, the CAB absorbs 10 % of the spaces and 25 % of the C-141 sorties; however, it also gives the division what is essentially its only true mobility for attack, reconnaissance, troop movement, resupply, and command and control. More importantly, the CAB gives the division a critical fourth maneuver brigade headquarters and provides the inherent command and control structure to accept corps assets (combat assault, attack, or reconnaissance) and integrate them effectively into the combined arms team.

The Army currently plans to activate two new light divisions — the 10th Division at Fort Drum, NY, and the 6th Division in Alaska — in addition to the conversion of the 7th Infantry Division which is now underway. The 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii will also be converted to a light infantry division. The two new light divisions are envisioned to have two active component brigades and one reserve component brigade. These divisions, although light, will be equipped with technically advanced, highly mobile equipment, especially in the areas of aviation, command control, night fighting equipment, and intelligence and electronic warfare systems.

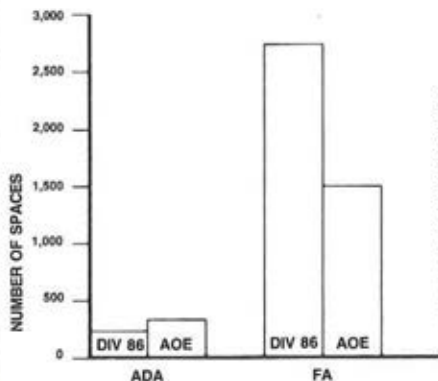

Side by side

How do the Army Aviation forces compare under the AOE relative to the Division 86 force design? Figure 3 and Figure 4 present a comparison of the aviation force before and after AOE. Although the final numbers may change slightly, the trend should remain valid. In comparison, Figure 5 and Figure 6 provide examples of other combined arm resource levels changes recommended for the AOE design.

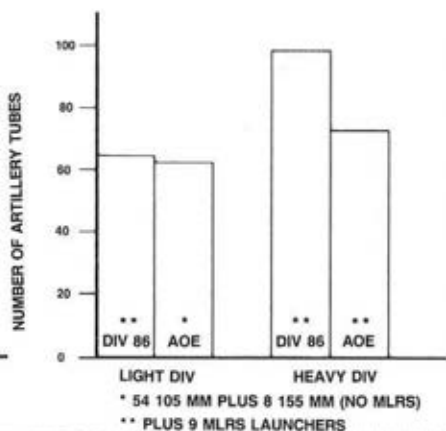

As evident from these examples, Army Aviation maintains a very substantial role in the AOE light force design. In the heavy divisions (mechanized and armor), the CAB was also preserved. The CAB in the heavy division has

STRENGTH COMPARISON

Figure 6
DIVISION ARTILLERY
RESOURCE COMPARISON

two attack helicopter battalions compared to the one in the light division. There is only one combat aviation company (combat assault) in the heavy division. The AOE force design will also provide a combat aviation brigade attached to each corps. These brigades have been designed to provide the corps commander with a means to influence the battle and provide divisional augmentation. Basically, they are heavily weighted with attack helicopter assets and can provide additional medium helicopter support to the division.

This means, for example, that the Commander of the 18th Airborne Corps will, for the first time, have a major aviation force to use as required to support or augment the division capability as dictated by the dynamics of the battlefield.

A very bright future

In summary, the AOE force design will provide the Army with a greatly improved capability to react rapidly to a wide variety of contingencies with a force well equipped for battle around the globe. The Army needs a very "lean and mean" force to meet these very serious challenges. Army Aviation, with our eventual capability to self-deploy, will play a major role in this mission. The Army has begun to field new aviation equipment — the AH-64A APACHE, the UH-60A BLACK HAWK, the CH-47D CHINOOK, and the OH-58D AHIP — to provide our forces with the means to meet these many commitments. Our pilots, crew chiefs, and support personnel are all well trained and are highly motivated to meet this challenge. The future outlook for Army Aviation is very bright. The AOE force design provides Army Aviation units an excellent opportunity to play an ever increasing role in the Army's mission in the defense of our nation — ABOVE THE BEST! IIIII

Like Major General "Dick" Kenyon, an Active Army partner with whom I serve on the AAAA National Board - and from whom you heard in last month's "Meet your Vice Presidents" column, I also serve as a National V.P. without specific title . . . but "with portfolio." My area of expertise - and a good part of the assistance and guidance I furnish the Association - concern themselves with the "technology" area and just how the Association membership - through its Chapters, Region, and National Conventions and symposia - can keep abreast of the constant changes and many innovations in this technology/R&D area.

How is this accomplished? It's done in two ways . . . Your Association magazine devotes a good part of its editorial coverage to articles that provide a general overview of specific "technology" areas . . . One recent example of this was the AVRADA-prepared 14-article, 53-page insert in the July-Aug. '84 issue that was devoted to "Avionics". The upcoming Jan. '85 issue is another example . . . It will provide a multi-page, 15-article segment that will update our membership on "Aviation Systems Command—1985."

Then too, the member's issues get into "technology/R&D/user" specifics, the nitty-gritty of ongoing hardware programs. These included a 70-page segment on the APACHE Program (Feb '84), a 19-page special report on the LHX (June, '84), and 24-page coverage on the Army's AHIP Program (Sept., '84). In 1985, the magazine will look at two programs, updating the LHX Program in its June issue, and covering the worldwide acceptance and use of the UH-60 BLACK HAWK in a combined August-September issue.

The second way in which the AAAA brings "technology" to the membership is by the conduct of more than 100 Chapter, Regional, and National gatherings at which key military and industry representatives serve as guest speakers. These professional-social Chapter meetings, symposia (ASE, Product Support, Logistics, avionics, etc.), and Regional and National Conventions place the very top authorities and exhibits before countless members on a worldwide scale.

Admittedly, the foregoing is a broad brush treatment of the entire subject, but it does tell you the many areas in which the Ass'n — and this particular V.P. — are involved.

Helicopter or Airplane. The Difference Is Your Choice.

The Bell LHX.

Bell's Advanced TiltRotor — The BAT — lifts off and hovers with helicopter precision. Then, in response to your single command, the rotors begin tilting forward, you accelerate, and in nine seconds you're in command of a fixed-wing type aircraft. And you're off like a bat at 270 knots per hour.

This extraordinary capability, combined with the BAT's unparalleled nap-of-the-earth agility, means the Army pilot of tomorrow will maneuver as never before, employing advanced tactical concepts that meet the Army's LHX requirements for aircraft that can move fast, strike deep and keep the enemy off balance.

Through the teamwork of Bell Helicopter Textron, Texas Instruments, Sperry Flight Systems and Honeywell, the BAT will employ the most sophisticated technologies of the future. Composite construction to reduce cost and weight. Sensor fusion for the most efficient mission equipment package. Digital/optical flight controls to optimize man-machine interface. All this only from the Bell LHX team.

As close as a CRT has ever come to thinking like a military pilot.

A pilot on a military mission has little time to make decisions. Split seconds at most.

Which means an avionics system has to do more than supply data. It has to supply the right information, at the right time, in an easy-to-read format.

At Collins Government Avionics, our second-generation color-display systems do just that—by automating both routine and complex functions, organizing information and effectively advising the crew with multi-function color CRTs.

These CRT displays use a variety of formats. For example: TV or FLIR pictures of the target overlaid with stores and EW information. Moving maps with flight routes and overlays of friendly as well as hostile installations. All tailored to the pilot's essential decision making needs. Whatever the aircraft, whatever the mission.

In the future, as missions are redefined,

WARRANT OFFICERS IN THE AVIATION BRANCH

BY COLONEL WILLIS R. BUNTING

In the November 1981 issue of Army Aviation, the Chief of the Warrant Officer Division at MILPERCEN, COL George Morgan, presented an article entitled "You've Come a Long Way, Mister!"

In that article, he talked of the history of the Warrant Officer Corps, a severe retention problem regarding aviation warrants and what had been done or was being done to retain more warrants and manage them better.

Three years have now gone by and the situation has changed rather dramatically. As the present Chief of the Division, I am pleased to take this opportunity to span the gap and then take a look into the future with you as I see it.

Looking backward

Let's depart from 1981. Retention of aviation warrants was a major problem for the Army and something had to be done about it. Requirements for warrants had far outstripped the population and the problem had been getting worse since late in the '70's. To turn the tide several actions were taken.

The first, and certainly most costly, was an increase of flight school graduates up to 1,000 per year programmed to start in 1984 with a steep ramp up in '82 and '83. In addition, the "recall" program was used to bring several hundred warrants voluntarily back from retirement and from the Reserve Components.

To improve retention of aviators then on active duty, the Army made some important changes in the incentive and management programs for our aviation warrant force. Retention initiatives included a raising and equalization of flight pay, reorganization of the Warrant Officer Division at MILPERCEN to provide more personalized management by MOS and skill rather than by geographic area, a substantial raise in base pay for all soldiers (provided by the Nunn Warner Pay Bill which was passed by Congress in 1981), and revised policies regarding aircraft qualification.

These were badly needed and very effective changes. They were put into effect at a time when the national economy was on the decline and ultimately went through what was referred to by some as a recession. The net result was a program that was to solve the desperate shortage of aviators by training more, recalling more, and retaining more.

Dramatic figures

The combination of all the above mentioned factors resulted in a dramatic shift in the retention of aviators as shown below:

Loss Rates by Reason-Category

Reason	FY 80	FY 81	FY 82
OBV (ETS)	.53	.42	.32
REFRAD	.07	.06	.05
RETIRE	.36	.30	.24

The figures clearly show that in a three year period the number of aviators leaving the Army at the end of the service obligation (ETS) went from more than half leaving to a little less than a third leaving. Also, the number of officers asking for voluntary release dropped by 2% and the number asking for retirement went down from over one third of all those eligible to less than one quarter of those eligible for retirement. (Warrant Officers — Continued on Page 54)

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

COL WILLIS R. BUNTING CURRENTLY SERVES AS CHIEF OF THE WARRANT OFFICER DIVISION AT THE MILITARY PERSONNEL CENTER (MILPERCEN) IN ALEXANDRIA, VA.

HOW THE HIDE-WHILE-YOU-SEEK SIGHTING SYSTEM TAKES THE SHAKES OUT OF BATTLEFIELD TARGETING.

While the helicopter hovers below tree and ridge lines, only the steerable, ball-shaped Mast-Mounted Sight is exposed to hostile eyes. The crew sees without being seen.

The crew also has a sharp, more jitter-free view of targets because the sensor mounts float in a magnetic field, virtually free of vibration. The result is crisp, unblurred images on the cockpit interactive displays. The mast-mounted sensors include telescopic TV for day sighting and infrared thermal imaging for missions previously limited by night, weather or battlefield smoke and haze conditions.

The McDonnell Douglas Mast-Mounted Sight is now being flown on Bell Helicopter Kiowa Aeroscouts under a fixed price development contract.

The Mast-Mounted Sight is the result of ten years of stabilized platform research. It has passed more than 300 hours of Army laboratory testing and 100 hours of development flight testing at the Army's Yuma proving ground.

Today's weapons are built to strike with great accuracy—if you can find the target! The technology is here to make possible clear, jitter-free sighting aboard helicopters and mobile land vehicles—wherever sensors are required in high-vibration environments.

It's Army Aviation's most coveted award . . . the "Outstanding Aviation Unit of the Year Award."

It's been presented to aviation companies . . . and it has also been won by divisions!

Its recipients have spanned the globe! Among its winners have been units from CONUS, Europe, the Caribbean, Alaska, Hawaii, and Viet Nam.

The award is normally made by the Army's top soldier, the Chief of Staff, at each year's National Convention of the AAAA.

Plan to be present in St. Louis during March 28 — March 31 1985, when the Army, and the AAAA, honor the winner of the "Outstanding Aviation Unit of the Year Award."

I understand that to receive a room at AAAA convention rates, I must register or attend at least one of the functions of the 1985 AAAA NATIONAL CONVENTION and that I must return this form to AAAA by MONDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1985. Reservations that are received after FEBRUARY 25, 1985 will be accepted on a space-available basis. Military identification may be requested by the hotel to receive a room at a military rate.

NOTE: All requests for hotel suites, other than AAAA Chapter Hospitality Suites, must be directed to Lynn Coakley, AAAA National Office, (203) 226-8184.

Reservations will be held until 4:00 p.m. unless guaranteed or covered by deposit equal to one night's stay. Guaranteed hotel reservations must be cancelled before 6 p.m. destination time on the day of arrival. Non-guaranteed reservations will be held until 4 p.m. destination time on the day of arrival, then released for sale to the general public. Cancellation of hotel reservations may be directed to AAAA by phone up to WEDNESDAY, MARCH 20, 1985.

Room charges are subject to applicable local and city taxes. Check-in time is 3:00 p.m. Check-out time is 1:00 p.m. If a room at the hotel you prefer is not available, one at the nearest rate will be reserved at a nearby AAAA-designated hotel.

Please complete and return this form with the appropriate Convention Fee or Fees and your hotel deposit, if applicable, to: AAAA, 1 Crestwood Road, Westport, CT 06880 by Monday, FEBRUARY 25, 1985.

9 September 1984

Dear Sirs:

My sweet husband, Otah Ruel Armstrong, Jr., died on 27 August 1984 of an apparent heart attack while running P.T. here at Fort Campbell.

This form came in the mail when I was not quite "at myself". But it would honor both of us if you would release this information anyway. He was a soldier's soldier and loved flying COBRA's. Thank you.

(Mrs.) Peggy A. Armstrong

removing the top and bottom staples in the issue's centerfold.

Our demonstrator engine for the LHX is running and sized right for the Army's requirement.

On August 2, 1984, our 1200 shp class TSE109 turboshaft demonstrator engine ran for the first time.

It met or exceeded every performance goal set for its first test series.

This important step for the Army's LHX engine requirement gives strong proof of our commitment to offer the latest in engine technology at the lowest risk.

The Garrett Turbine Engine Company and the Allison Gas Turbine Division of General Motors have agreed to form an affiliation to bid for the development of the Army's LHX power plant.

This landmark approach assures the U.S. Army of advanced technology, recognized expertise in rotorcraft propulsion integration, and competitive production to reduce cost throughout the life of the program.

Our combined offering will be called the ATE109 (Advanced Technology Engine), and will provide the lowest development risk of any engine proposed. That's because it shares virtually the same power section with Garrett's F109 turbofan trainer engine and will incorporate Allison's proven ATDE technology.

The F109 power section has already undergone 1700 hours of rigorous testing and by LHX contract award will have been factory and altitude tested for over 4000 hours. In addition, Allison has met or exceeded all of the Army's goals for advanced helicopter engines during the recently completed ATDE program.

The ATE109 also will set new military standards for durability, performance and safety. Because this advanced turboshaft meets the stringent Engine Structural Integrity Program (ENSIP), which is now being considered for all future U.S. Army engines.

Keep in mind that while the number of aviators leaving the Army was on a decline the training base was programmed for an increase to 1,000 per year. The situation then in late 1982 and early 1983 was more coming in from flight school and more staying as a result of many factors of which one at least, the economy, was very unpredictable.

To add to the dilemma, Congress then imposed a budgetary limit on the Army which required a strength ceiling of approximately 780,000 total soldiers. The Warrant Officer slice of that pie was determined to be 15,600 of which approximately 43% can be Aviation Warrants by Army policy. The situation in 1983, then, was a 180° turn from the late '70s and early '80s. We found ourselves in an overstrength position with our surplus of personnel predicted to become even worse in the future.

If our training rate of 1,000 new Aviation Warrants every year were left unchanged, we could readily see that that our overstrength could have exceeded 1,000 by the end of FY84. (We would have had an inventory of 7,071 with authorized strength set at only 5,915).

Reducing our output

To preclude this from happening, a decision was made to reduce annual flight school output from 1,000 to 600 in 1984 and beyond. This reduction in training brought down our population of Aviation Warrants as predicted, and would have resulted in our authorized strength and actual inventory being equal by end of fiscal year 1985.

It was at this point in history, however, that the budgetary limit imposed by Congress came into play and further complicated the problem and the required solution. Simply stated, the number of soldiers that our TOE and TDA say we need exceeds the number we can have — 780,000. In particular, the number of warrant officers authorized in aviation plus those in transient, hospitalized, and students (THS) adds up to more than the number we can have on the payroll. (This is true also for the commissioned and enlisted ranks).

The result of all this was a need to reduce the number of aviation warrants down to the budget limit, rather than just down to the authorized number. Originally, our reduced personnel target had been authorized strength plus THS because that is really what we need to man our force and still be able to rotate people and send them to the various needed schools.

The predicted overstrength in terms of the budget limit (BES) and authorized strength plus THS for the rest of this decade (projected to be 800 in 1990 as seen in Figure 1) takes into account the reduction in flight school training. It is based on FY 1983 continuation rates (people who stay in) and the '83 stay rate was even higher than the 1982 rate already shown. It was, in fact, an aggregate retention of 94% of all of our aviation warrants.

This continued overstrength had to be dealt with and brings us to the current situation. The number of aviation warrant officers must be brought down to the BES limit. In other words, we must live within our means.

However, we cannot afford to just shut down the flight school because the Branch must have a steady flow of young, new blood and our need for aviation warrants is predicted to increase in the future. We must also consider the distinct possibility that 94% of our aviation warrants may not elect to stay in the Army in future years.

Clearly a solution had to be found that would correct the current overstrength and provide for the contingency of an increased demand for aviators in future years whether that demand comes from increased requirements, decreased retention, or both.

What are we doing?

What have we done and what will we do to meet the Aviation Branch need to live within its means and still meet contingencies of the future?

The first steps were highly emotional and much talked about administrative procedures. Initially, a qualitative screen of young aviators was conducted as they applied for career status (VI). Those with weak records of performance and doubtful potential were not allowed to stay on active duty beyond ETS.

Despite many rumors in the field and stories of a DA witch hunt, only 129 of those applying were denied career status. This happened mainly in 1983 and mostly affected aviators with

Looking on the Dark Side

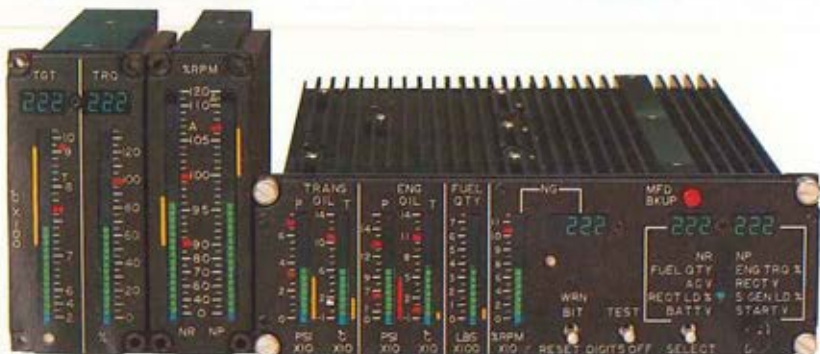

First the bright side of our story: Canadian Marconi Opto Electronic Vertical Scale Engine Instruments are standard on all Black Hawk, Seahawk, Nighthawk, Apache and AHIP helicopters.

The dark side is also a success story: for AHIP, CMC has developed filtered incandescent displays that are fully compatible with night vision goggles and still retain color differentiation.

If your helicopter has to go out in the dark, talk to CMC. We'll help you see the light.

Ametek's new vertical scale displays reduce weight, power and cost.

Featuring all solid state design, these vertical scale instruments offer major advantages over incandescent lamp/optoelectronic systems. For example, weight is reduced by 50% (not including the reduced cabling requirements) and power consumption is about 1/8 that of an incandescent system. Plus, there's never a burned-out filament to reduce resolution and lower MTBF.

The liquid crystal display with electroluminescent backlighting improves visibility under a wide variety of ambient light conditions. This technology is compatible with GEN II/GEN III night vision goggles. And, with the reduced maintenance and spares requirements, there are significant cost advantages too. an ETS that expired in FY 84 and 85. In addition, the Warrant Officer Division conducted a 100% screen of all Warrant Officers and recommended elimination of poor performers and disciplinary problems regardless of the length of service. This is a healthy and cleansing effort and will continue regardless of our strength status.

Some 150+ have been separated in this program. Horror stories notwithstanding, only 11 aviators were removed from flight status because of withdrawn medical waivers and all of these had a requirement to fly with a fully qualified pilot reducing their combat readiness to that of fulltime co-pilots. No other category of medical waiver was withdrawn despite any rumors you may have heard.

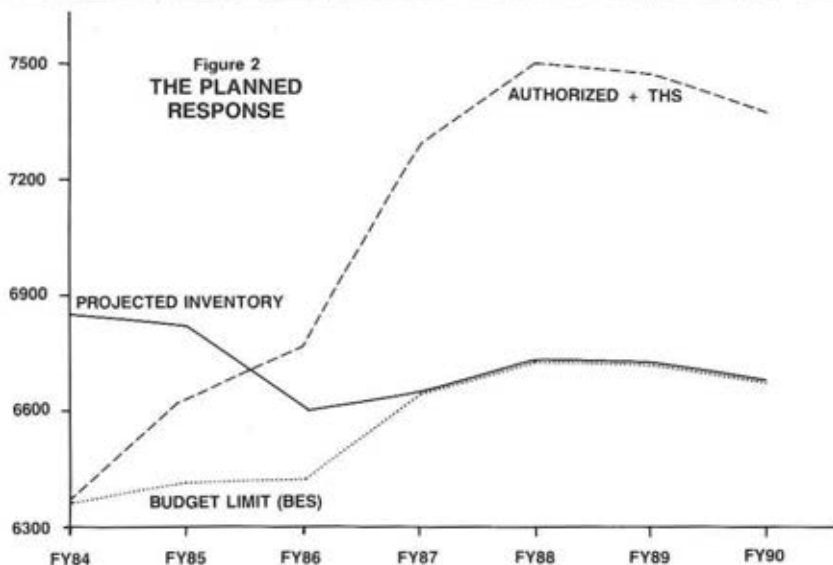

These programs, although very healthy from a quality perspective, were insufficient to bring the strength down to the aforementioned budget limit and additional measures are being taken or will be taken.

In the summer of this year, the decision to resolve the overstrength by the end of FY 87 was made. The goal is to be less than 105% of the BES by the end of FY 86 and tangent to the budget line by the end of FY 87. To accomplish this, several actions are involved:

1. Reduce WO flight school to 500/year starting in FY 85.
2. Further reduce the number of IERW graduates coming into the active force as follows:
 - FY-85 — 455
 - FY-86 — 400
 - FY-87 — 442
3. Divert the difference to troop program units of the Army Reserve by establishing a high school to flight school recruiting program to be conducted for and by the Reserve as follows:

FY-85 — 45

FY-86 — 100

FY-87 — 58

4. Deny VI by centralized board action at HQDA for aviation warrants coming up on OBV expiration (ETS) at the following rates:

FY-85 — 92

FY-86 — 217

FY-87 — 0

FY-88 — 0

These are admittedly bold steps and they have some possible pitfalls. Because we're dealing with human beings, economic factors, and an unstable world situation — all of which are very difficult to predict accurately — we have to be able to adjust to a changing tactical situation with confidence and flexibility.

Therefore, we've established special, top feed data bases, and we'll review the whole program every six months looking for changes in continuation rates, authorizations, and projected strength. We do not want to exceed our budget goals, but neither can we tolerate another shortage like the one with which COL Morgan had to contend.

Not even one

It's also extremely important for all of you to know that the Warrant Officer Division is dedicated to not separating involuntarily even one more aviation warrant officer than is absolutely necessary.

The situation as we see it now, and how it was briefed to the DCSPER when the decisions were made, is depicted in Figure 2. It is important to keep firmly in mind that this plan will bring us to the budget limit by the end of FY 87 and not to our authorized strength.

Am I saying that the Army will be short aviation warrants when compared to TOE and TDA requirements? YES!

It's rather like our situation in the ranks of Major and Lieutenant Colonel. We have many more requirements for those on our TOE than the Defense Officer Personnel Management Act (DOPMA) will allow. The Aviation Branch can rest assured, however, that we will continue to work on this problem through the remainder of the decade and review the bidding every six months at a minimum.

We in the Warrant Officer Division and MILPERCEN are dedicated to assuring, to the best of our ability, that combat power is not degraded and that not a single aviation warrant officer is treated unfairly. As this article goes to press, we're preparing a special briefing for the Vice Chief of Staff. Assuming that there is some releasable result or change in the future situation, I hope to get word to you in a future issue of this magazine.

Looking ahead

We've taken a glance backward and tried to show you "how we got here from there." "Here" finds us a legitimate member of the combat arms with our own branch. Not since the old ACSFOR Aviation have we had anything like a single voice for Army Aviation and, as far as we are concerned, it's a change long overdue.

As we head for the end of the decade and on into the 1990's, we can look forward to exciting times with the advent of the AHIP, AH-64, JVX, and many new systems with their increased capability to meet and destroy the enemy. We can also expect to see an increased requirement for the aviation expert, our Aviation Warrant Officers.

Despite some wild rumors that the aim of the branch is to eliminate the warrant officer, the truth is that the requirement for Aviation Warrant Officers will increase. Let me show you what our current documented requirement is: the authorization for FY 85 is 6,151; FY 86 is 6,289; FY 87 is 6,786; FY 88 is 6,990; FY 89 is 6,968; and the requirement for FY 90 is projected to be 6,898.

Keep in mind that these are already documented requirements in TOE and TDA. They do not include initiatives from the Branch that propose things like making TDA flight detachments entirely the purview of the Aviation Warrant Officer. So, contrary to those in authority at the end of the bar in the rumor mill, the Branch sees a continued and increasing need for our warrants.

I know the senior leadership in the Army feels the same way. As Chief of the Warrant Officer Division, I see senior commanders almost daily who are asking for more warrants to be authorized on the various TOE.

Leadership questions

While I'm on the subject of senior leadership in the Army and the Aviation Branch, let me debunk another popular rumor that says the commissioned officers will take over all IP slots in the future because battalion commanders now must go through IP school. Nothing could be further from the truth!

In fact, the highest levels of authority in our Army made that decision to insure that your line commanders have a real feeling for the problems and the need for proper training through their own experience. There is no intention for them to perform IP duties on anything like a daily basis.

Quite frankly, they don't have the time if they're leading their units properly and that's what we're all interested in. What we're all looking for is leadership that is technically proficient in aviation unit operations, not LTC IP's. Our branch is totally dedicated to providing us with just that.

Another facet of future leadership in aviation that will occur as a result of our new branch is that we will have truly aviation-qualified platoon leaders and company commanders. No longer will we get a company commander coming from a ground job just because he needs gate time.

In the future, our Lieutenants and Captains won't be off to get "ground/branch qualified". They will be in the aviation business performing duties as leaders in the aviation combat arm. An added plus to the branch are the officer basic and advanced courses taught to our company grade aviators to insure that they are well versed in both aviation and the combined arms team.

Another real plus the new branch provides to our warrants are the revisions planned for the Aviation Warrant Officer Advanced Course that will insure the AWOs are also provided with combined arms training and are trained in other subjects that will enhance their full membership and participation in the newest combat arm. Let's remember that the branch plans include the employment of warrants as combat section leaders in the new J-series TOE organizations.

A vital study

As we move toward the end of the decade, the role of the Warrant Officer Corps is likely to change and Warrants will be the single track, single speciality officer of the future with very heavy emphasis on technical expertise. The Chief of Staff has directed that a new effort, the Total Warrant Officer Study (TWOS), kick off in October, 1984, with the report to the Chief due in late summer of 1985.

This group, with 11 warrant action officers, will develop a complete management system to meet the Army and WO needs to the end of this century. It will study and recommend appropriate changes in the following areas: the definition and role of the WO in the future Army; pay and benefits; a 30 year Regular Army career program; CW5/6; graded positions; retention beyond 30 years; management by total warrant officer service rather than total active federal service; the military education system to include the WOSC; and ways to manage the strength to meet the future Army needs.

This is an exciting prospect, for if they do the job well, they'll develop a complete and workable WO Personnel Management System (WOPMS). This group will be working closely with the Warrant Officer Division, the Aviation School, other proponents, and the troops in the field, to insure that the best possible personnel system is recommended to the Chief of Staff for implementation.

In the meantime, the Warrant Officer Division will continue to insure that the Army's needs are met, and that the Warrant Officer in today's Army is provided with the best possible schooling, training, assignments, and professional development.

Things to look for in the near future include:

1. IERW turnaround students into the CHINOOK, COBRA and BLACK HAWK to insure that new blood is infused into these weapon systems. As indicated by this year's fixed-wing selection board, younger warrants will also be selected to attend FWQC. They will be, as a minimum, in the grade of W2, will be Advanced Course grads, and should have four years of warrant service.

2. COBRA pilots will transition into the AH-64 in fairly large numbers starting in 1985. All warrants qualified in the APACHE will come from already qualified and experienced 100E.

3. Selection for attendance at the WOSC, in either the resident or correspondence mode, will be done by a yearly HQDA centralized selection board.

4. MOS floors and ceilings will be established for all selection and promotion boards to insure that the Army's needs are met. This is consistent with the commission and enlisted systems and is good management practice. We must insure that those in critical MOS are retained in the Army in the right quality and quantity.

5. Selection for VI will continue to be done by HQDA centralized selection boards rather than in the Warrant Officer Division. This policy was instituted this year and the first board met in August, 1984, and the next will meet in March, 1985. The next board will consider all officers with an OBV expiration or PVI expiration (ETS) that occurs in FY 86. It, too, will be charged with the responsibility of retaining in career status only those warrants that meet the quality and quantity needs of the service.

6. Opportunity to attend the advanced and senior courses will increase because the Aviation School will schedule ten classes rather than two per year starting in 1985.

7. Personnel assigned to the Warrant Officer Division will come from the ranks of the tactical, TOE Army. They will all be WOSC graduates with years of experience and be dedicated to providing the best and most personal career management possible. We have a good team now and intend to keep it that way.

Worth staying for

The future looks worth staying around to see. The Warrant Officer Division is dedicated to support of the Aviation Branch and all of its members. Its mission is to provide the Army with properly qualified warrant officers in the right place at the right time and we intend to accomplish our mission. ■■■

PORTABLE MILITARY BUILDINGS

Rubb buildings are used by NATO forces and are ideal for aircraft repair, work shops, hangars and CPs. They range in span from 9 ft to 116 ft by any length. They are of modular design; the frame is galvanized steel tube sections with Rubb joints for easy assembly; the cover is coated polyester which can be translucent, camouflage or infrared reflective and will not rot. Rubb structures are light, compact, easily moved, require minimal foundations, yet handle high winds and heavy snow loads. For more information write or call:

Annual AAAA Chapter Awards

One of the Association's growing programs involves annual Chapter awards recognizing outstanding local area accomplishments by a Chapter "Aviator, Soldier, and DAC of the Year." To date, the Aviation Center, Ft. Hood, Aloha, Air Assault, Wings of the Marne, Morning Calm, Valley View, and Air Cav Chapters have, at one time or another, selected and recognized their "Best". The Nat'l Office, in supporting this program, furnishes complimentary walnut plaques and personalized "Certificates of Achievement" on receipt of the Chapter Awardees' names.

TOP HONORS -- SP5 William J. Hughes (right), a shift supervisor at Shell Army Airfield, Fort Rucker, AL, has been named the "US Army Air Traffic Controller of the Year" for 1984. He accepted the award from LTG Emmet Paige, Jr., Commanding General of the US Army Information Systems Command, at Ft. Huachuca, AZ, on 6 October. CW2 Richard J. Wallach, Quality Assurance Officer, USAISC Signal Battalion, Ft. Rucker, AL, was named the "ATC Manager of the Year" and SFC Leon J. Thornton, formerly of the 256th Signal Support Company at Ft. Rucker, was honored as the "ATC Maintenance Technician of the Year." AAAA "Certificates of Outstanding Achievement" were also presented to the 1st Platoon, 192nd ATC Company (Forward), Ft. Campbell, KY, the "ATC Combat Support Platoon of the Year," and to Humphreys Tower, Desiderio Army Airfield, Republic of Korea, honored as the "ATC Facility of the Year."

HALLOWEEN BALL — The Chesapeake Bay Chapter held its 1st annual Halloween party at the Aberdeen Proving Ground Officers Club on 27 October. Shown together above are the Big Chicken (Chapter President CW4 Ketih Harris) and Cinderella (his wife, Mary).

A HISTORIC SOUVENIR — A 1½ inch diameter commemorative coin marking the establishment of the Aviation Branch is now available from the Army Aviation Museum Gift Shop, Ft. Rucker, AL.

The initial set of "charter member coins" are finished in a silver color, and may be engraved with your name. Subsequent versions will be bronze, and will not have room for an inscription.

Prepaid mail orders are $4 for each coin, including postage. For $5, engraving up to 15 letters will be included. Checks or money orders payable to the Army Aviation Museum Foundation should be mailed to P.O. Box H, Ft. Rucker, AL 36362-5000.

All proceeds will go toward the construction of a new museum building.
