RAH-66 Comanche

Life Saver.

The Army's existing fleet of helicopters cannot adequately perform armed reconnaissance.

The RAH-66 Comanche has what these helicopters can never provide:

- 20 times greater survivability – saves lives in combat and peacetime operations
- 5 times greater accuracy locating and identifying targets – minimizes friendly fire casualties
- 5 times more combat effective – more than doubles Combined Arms Team effectiveness
- Capability to self-deploy worldwide – flies to any flashpoint and gets into battle early
- $20 billion taxpayer savings – reduces support equipment 83%, manpower 32%, and spares 34%

Briefings

The U.S. Army Aviation Applied Technology Directorate (USAAATD) of the Aviation Research, Development, and Engineering Center, Ft. Eustis, VA, announced that it has awarded a sole-source contract to Shorts Missile Systems (SMS) of Belfast, Ireland to investigate issues affecting the integration of the Air-To-Air Starstreak (ATASK) Missile onto the AH-64A Apache attack helicopter.

The Fifth Annual Air Assault Challenge at Ft. Rucker, AL will be held 15-17 November 1995, with units from worldwide invited to send their best teams to compete to see who is the most proficient in all areas of Air Assault operations. Contestants, regardless of rank, service, or gender, are invited to enter, with teams of two each competing against each other. Following one day of inprocessing and refresher training, contestants will have two days of tests and exams. A pre-challenge pamphlet and entry information are available by writing: Commander, D Company, Air Assault School, 1st Battalion, 10th Aviation Regiment, 1st Aviation Brigade (AASLT), Ft. Rucker, AL 36362-5000, or by telephone at Comm: (334) 255-1118 or DSN 558-1118. Registration deadline is 2 November 1995.

The Department of Defense has accepted the fourth Hunter UAV system for the Joint Tactical Unmanned Aerial Vehicle (JT-UAV) program on 30 June. The team of prime contractor TRW Inc. and major subcontractor Israel Aircraft Industries Ltd. (IAI) produced the system under a $169M low-rate initial production contract for seven systems. Currently, total deliveries include 33 air vehicles, eight ground control stations, and other ground support equipment. Deliveries began 14 April to D Company, 304th Military Intelligence Battalion, Ft. Huachuca, AZ.

The AH-64D Longbow Apache was selected by the British Ministry of Defence (MoD) on 13 July 1995 as Great Britain's new advanced attack helicopter. The Westland Apache team, led by Westland/GKN, McDonnell Douglas, and Lockheed Martin, will provide the British Army with the system.

Army officials at Ft. Rucker, AL have verified that since DynCorp's Ft. Rucker Division won the aircraft maintenance contract in October 1988, U.S. Army Aviation School aircraft have flown over 2,000,000 hours without an accident-charged maintenance error. The 400 available training aircraft are comprised of eight separate fleets of different helicopter types, each with distinctly different requirements. DynCorp provides aviation unit maintenance and intermediate level maintenance at three separate basefield locations with additional intermediate and limited depot maintenance performed at a fourth location.

Whirl testing of the Boeing Sikorsky RAH-66 Comanche's Bearingless Main Rotor (BMR) system began on 17 July 1995. The testing will evaluate rotor performance, durability, and aeromechanical stability. The BMR will also undergo a 100-hour endurance run prior to the Comanche prototype's first flight in November 1995.

ARMY AVIATION: THE FUTURE OF THE ARMY

Let me start off and offer congratulations to the people who you have honored this week, the individuals, the military and civilians, Active Component, Reserve Components, aviators, and members of America's Army. All people that you have inducted into the Hall of Fame are great choices.

Let me also congratulate and thank the American industry that is here tonight. I thank you for two reasons: First, without you, sessions like this would not be possible. Secondly, and more importantly, you provide the American fighting soldiers the finest equipment in the world. All of us who are fortunate enough to wear the green suit thank you every day in many, many ways. I deeply appreciate what you have done for America's Army.

Army Aviation, Vanguard of Change, what a great theme. I want to talk a little bit about change. I want to talk about the change in America's Army, and I also want to talk about the myths that come with that change. I would offer the premise that the pace of change we have seen in the last 50 years will seem glacial when we look at the next 50 years.

The question that I think all of us have to ask is, how will Army Aviation respond to that change? I think the Army has spent the first parts of this decade getting ready for that change. We have written a new doctrine. We have expanded the term "Operational Continuum", to include a very vague term called "Operations Other Than War". And we've made "reengineering" and "reinventing" more than just buzz words; they are the way we do business, the way we make things more efficient.

The bottom line is that the Army of tomorrow will be vastly different than the Army of today. The Information Age demands this, and we have already started. Today, we have a streamlined power projection Army. You saw it up close and personal in October 1994 when we simultaneously deployed troops to Kuwait and Haiti. Fast sea lift, C-17, prepositioned equipment, they were all there. Soldiers, quality soldiers, soldiers who were capable of executing an audible at the line of scrimmage when the snap count had already started. They switched from a take-down mission in Haiti to a humanitarian assistance mission.

Tomorrow, you will see Force XXI, you will see third wave warfare, you will see shared situational awareness. You will see how we have leveraged information technology to enable us to fight in a very new and different manner. We have done our preflight checks and we are ready to launch. But first of all, I think we have to deal with some of the myths that I see in the world. Let me talk about those myths for just a second.

The first myth that often comes up is that the world is at peace. In reality this is still a dangerous, complex, and unpredictable world. Since 1989, the United States Military has been used 32 times. We have often put our soldiers in harm's way. We have issued over 700 purple hearts, and while many of those were associated with Operation DESERT STORM, some of them were not.

Today, we have over 24,000 soldiers deployed temporarily in 71 different countries. Jane's Defense Weekly talks about 12 flash points where war could start any minute, and they talk about another 31 threat areas. That is important for us to continue to monitor. It is in a truly dangerous world that we live. Our former foes are now our allies. Resources are down 36%, while operating tempo in terms of deployment is up 300%. It is an unpredictable world we live in.

Today's challenge is a challenge of balance. It's the balance between the dollars that we put into operational readiness and the dollars that we put in the quality of life for our quality people. It's a balance between the time we spend getting ready for Operations Other Than War and the time we spend getting ready for combat. It's the balance between the size of the active component and the size of the reserve components, so we can put those three components together on the fly and form a seamless Army. It's the balance between the size of America's Army, the seamless Army that I talked about, and the modernization of America's Army.

The second myth is that the U.S. Army is the largest and most powerful Army in the world. Reality is that this is partially correct. We are the only military superpower in the world. Operation DESERT STORM, Hurricane Andrew, Somalia, Haiti, and Kuwait demonstrated that the Army is certainly not the largest. In fact, the U.S. Army is smaller than Pakistan's Army. We rank eighth in the world. What that really means is that size is not important; what is important to all of us is quality. It's the quality of the equipment and most of all, the quality of the people that we have in America's Army.

The third myth, and probably the most damaging myth, is the myth that America spends too much on defense. The reality is far different. I will grant you that $270 billion, which is the approximate amount we spent on defense this year, is not pocket change by anybody's standard. That is a lot of money. But I think it is important to keep that amount of money in perspective in terms of the overall wealth of the United States of America. In 1995, that amount of money represents less than 4% of our gross domestic product. It's scheduled to go down to less than 3% of the gross domestic product in 1999. 1995 is the tenth year of declining buying power. In 1999, we will put the smallest amount of money in defense of any time since Pearl Harbor. Norm Augustine, the president of Lockheed-Martin, I think put that in perspective as well as anybody. He said that the United States of America spends more on le-

Then almost instantaneously, the Apache can transmit target data to air and ground units for battle planning and engagement.

Longbow Apache, with its fire control radar and digital avionics, will be the premiere system within the Army's Force XXI, controlling the Battlespace through real-time information and efficient battle management.

The multi-role Longbow Apache will maintain overwhelming dominance and provide a significant deterrent to aggression.

Performance Above and Beyond

galized gambling than we do on the Department of Defense. We as Americans spend more on beer and pizza than we spend on training, maintaining, and equipping the United States Army every year. The point here is America should not spend one penny more than she needs on defense, but we can certainly afford whatever defense we need. That doesn't mean that we shouldn't do things better; that doesn't mean that we shouldn't emphasize efficiency; that's what reinvention and reengineering is all about. All we are trying to do is give the taxpayers the maximum amount of readiness for every dollar that they give us.

The fourth myth, and the myth that hits a little closer to home for this group, is the myth that Army Aviation was born with a silver spoon, the fact that you had it easy. The reality, after I have checked the facts and gone back into your history, is that it's been a hard row to hoe. Today, it is fully respected because it has earned the right to be a full-fledged member of the Combined Arms Team. Nothing proved that more than what you have done recently. In 1991, it was Army Aviation that took out the Ground Control Radars and opened the door to Baghdad. In Somalia, you helped us out tremendously. You continue to train at the National Training Center, you continue to make the difference out there in many of the battles that we see. You have flown off Navy ships, and you have done everything that we have asked you. You are a full and valued member of the Combined Arms Team.

The fifth myth, and the last myth that I will talk about, is the myth that Aviation has no future. The reality is that without Army Aviation, the Army has no future. Let me try to explain that in terms of the battlespace and how that has changed over time. If you go back to the Civil War, you find that most of our battles were fought over ten square miles. And if you take the number of soldiers who were involved in those battles, it meant that for each soldier, there were about 2,700 square feet of terrain. That is about the size of the stage that I am on here today.

If you go then from the Civil War (a little over a hundred years ago) to Operation DESERT STORM, you find that the battlefield has increased to 80,000 square miles. If you take the number of soldiers who fought in that battle, what you find is that each soldier now is responsible for 4.5 million square feet; that's larger than the floor space of the Atlanta Airport. It's about 130 times the size of this room we're in today. And while I grant you that lethality has increased, it has not kept pace with the dispersion that we find on the battlefield.

That has tremendous implications for all of us, particularly for Army Aviation. It means that we must leverage technology in order to compensate for this dispersion. We did this in Operation DESERT STORM, but we need to do more of it and we need to do it better. That's why we are interested in Third Wave Warfare because that allows us to maintain the edge that we enjoy right now. It gives new meaning to the word "synchronization". It means that we must ensure the air cover is complementary to the fire support, and vice-versa.

DO YOUR PART IN SHAPING OUR FUTURE

As we forge ahead, building the Army of the 21st Century, Army Aviation has remained at the forefront, and will continue to remain on the leading edge throughout our transformation to Force XXI. Our successes are directly attributable to the outstanding members of our Aviation team — uniformed, civilian, retirees and industry, many of whom are included in this Blue Book edition.

This reshaping of our Army into Force XXI has introduced many challenges. As General Reimer mentions in his article, "Resources are down 36%, while operating tempo in terms of deployment is up 300%." These numbers characterize the challenge — anything we can do to enhance our effectiveness as we go through the process of change will benefit our Army and our branch. Adding to those challenges is the impact of the Army Aviation modernization plan and the Aviation Restructuring Initiative (ARI), both of which are also significant milestones towards the endstate our senior leaders have visualized.

You help shape the future by the work you do each and every day. For example, some of the most important lessons we are learning about the future are emerging from our brigades and battalions in the field, which are reorganizing while training, and performing missions. As each unit transitions through the ARI process, or modernizes, or fights an aviation task force at a combat training center, there is even more information that can and should be passed on to those that follow.

As we progress through this period of change, it is imperative that we share these lessons. I highly encourage you writers in the field to share your experiences. We already have the documented after action reviews of our aviation brigades which have done it, whether it is successful completion of ARI, or deployment of an aviation task force to NTC.

We have an obligation to assist those who follow, to give them a good, solid start point, by sharing our knowledge or "Blueprint for Success".

An excellent article published in the July 1995 issue worth highlighting was written by the Commander, 6th Squadron, 6th Cavalry Regiment, 11th Aviation Regiment in USAREUR. LTC Bill Wimbish provided an outstanding perspective of what it takes to successfully negotiate the ARI process, in terms of operations, personnel, and logistics. It outlined individual/crew training through the collective training involved in organizing a combat ready squadron for battle. He offers good guidelines for future battalions undergoing ARI.

So take the time to get those helpful hints on paper and send them to us for publishing. If each unit that follows in your footsteps can perform more effectively as a result of the lessons you have learned, we will become even more successful as a branch. And remember that the lessons you share are also essential in helping us redefine the tactics, techniques and procedures of our evolving doctrine.

Since we are focused on people in this issue, I would like to welcome three new members to the Aviation Center Team: BG Burt S. Tackaberry, the Deputy Commanding General; COL Jan Callen, the new Chief of Staff and COL Jim Mowery, the new Deputy Assistant Commandant. Three experienced aviation veterans who bring a wealth of knowledge to the senior leadership of our branch. They will help us meet the challenges ahead by remaining Above the Best!

FUTURE

It means that we must take the fight to the enemy. We have to take that fight to the enemy across the width and depth of the battlefield, and that's what Army Aviation can do at a pace that no enemy can handle. Only if we develop Army Aviation to its fullest potential can we ensure decisive victory. That's what the American public demands, and that's what each and every one of us wants to give them. I sign up for that, and I sign up for the future of Army Aviation.

Let me conclude by saying the world has changed dramatically in the past 50 years. The Army has changed and Army Aviation has truly been the vanguard of change. You have taken us to new horizons. The future is uncertain, it's challenging, it's different, and it's exciting. The question is, can you take us beyond those horizons? The answer is an unqualified "yes". Not because of any one aircraft or any piece of equipment that I see ... not because of our doctrine, not because of tactics and techniques, but because of the people who we have, the men and women of Army Aviation. The people who are represented here in this room tonight. That's why I am confident about the future, that's why I am confident about Army Aviation continuing to give it a try. I think that's terribly important. I thank you for your kind attention tonight, and I thank you for the great job that you have done for America's Army. God bless you, and have a great evening.

“STRIPES ON THE FLIGHTLINE”

Technological advances have increased combat capability. This proliferation of technology has increased the workload of the enlisted aircraft maintainer. This has occurred for our enlisted soldiers without a proportionate increase in training, experience, or maturity. To maintain the combat capability of a CONUS-based power projection Army, the Aviation Branch must have crewmembers and aircraft maintainers with greater experience and capability.

The reality of a smaller Army is that each specialty will have to do the same things they do today or, in some cases, meet a greater OPTEMPO with less. Smaller requires maximum utilization of available resources. The Stripes on the Flightline, or “Stripes”, initiative attempts to maximize the available personnel to keep aircraft in the flight. The Senior Stripes portion addresses the dilemma good aviation maintenance soldiers face when they leave maintenance and take leadership or staff positions to make them competitive for promotion. “Stripes” allows soldiers to remain in maintenance and remain competitive for promotion.

Senior Stripes develops two separate and distinct career paths or tracks. The technical track is contained in CMF 67, and the leadership track is contained in CMF 15.

The technical track retains all technical positions in CMF 67 and moves authorizations from selected TDA locations to TOE assignment. CMF 15 encompasses CMF 93 and the leadership functions of CMF 67. Aviation maintenance soldiers would be promoted into either a leadership or technical track when they are promoted to Sergeant First Class. Once promoted in a track, a soldier would remain there for the

NO-NOTICE CHECKRIDES

This is the first article to arrive in response to the AAAA AWO Committee's open letter to the membership in the June issue of ARMY AVIATION encouraging authors to submit articles focused on Warrant Officers.

Several years ago the ATM was changed to include the use of no-notice checkrides. There was relatively little guidance given to the field as to the use or conduct of this evaluation. The order was given that no-notice checkrides and oral exams would be conducted! After all, we expect our aviators to be proficient in all required tasks every time they go out on an assigned mission.

There were as many different ways of conducting no-notice checkrides as there were instructor pilots and instrument examiners. It seems that the original no-notice checkrides were conducted by the unit instructor showing up at the operations counter, displacing the co-pilot that had been assigned to the mission, and informing the PIC that this would be a no-notice checkride.

The instructor and PIC would sit down at a table and the instructor would ask a "few" questions. Can the aviator recite the unit tactical SOP, the Federal

"We don't need [one] which simply duplicates the current annual individual aviator flight evaluation..."

Aviation Regulations, the Airman's Information Manual, AR95-1, the airfield SOP, the aircraft operating limitations and emergency procedures? If the aviator was able to get through this oral evaluation, the same evaluation style continued in the aircraft.

Basically, this fostered an adversarial relationship in which the PIC was being placed "on the spot" and required to perform a no-notice annual individual flight evaluation. The problem is that we were not seeing the PIC conduct a mission and use all the resources normally available to him or her during the conduct of the mission. All we were doing was intimidating the aviator with another APART checkride.

Over the years, we have seen the no-notice checkride mature and provide much greater value to the Commander. When the checkride is used to evaluate the entire mission from start to finish, not just an individual aviator's proficiency, we can spot many potential problems. If the aircraft has a cargo or utility mission and multiple crewmembers, the evaluator can normally observe the mission from a jumpseat. This allows all crewmembers to be in their appropriate seats and conducting their assigned tasks. This also allows the evaluator to observe the interaction between crewmembers, ATC, and the supported unit personnel.

The evaluation will then be able to spot other potential problems such as flight planning and weather briefing deficiencies, aircraft maintenance procedural problems, aircraft weight and balance, crewchief training and duties, passenger briefings, cargo loading and tie down procedures, mission tasking, and aviator training deficiencies.

The Army is better served by the Commander who implements a no-notice checkride program that is adding real value to Army Aviation safety by observing those tasks which can not be seen on an individual evaluation. We don't need a no-notice checkride which simply duplicates the current annual individual aviator flight evaluation and shows that the unit complies with command directives to conduct an active no-notice evaluation program. The tax payer, our passengers and the people that we fly above deserve more than just a duplication of effort. They deserve the higher level of safety which is achievable with the use of a no-notice evaluation program which reviews the entire mission operation.

remainder of his or her career. Stripes leadership track would send soldiers to leadership development schools. The 15 series soldiers would be the platoon sergeants, the first sergeants, and the operations sergeants. Stripes technical track would be designated with 67 series MOSs and would send soldiers to technical as well as leadership development schools. The 67 series soldiers would be maintenance activity and shop supervisors.

Would the 93 series soldier "steal" all the promotions? No—because promotion authorizations would be split for the leadership and technical tracks. They would not compete outside of their series. All 67 and 15 series soldiers would have a single capper MOS which is 67Z or 15Z.

This initiative moves authorizations. Many of which come from TDA locations and move to TOE locations. It delivers one sergeant major to each corps and division AVIM. It delivers two additional master sergeants to each AVIM and one additional master sergeant to each AVUM.

At the bottom line, aircraft are maintained better, soldiers are trained better, and soldiers in low density specialties are promoted equally with those in denser specialties.

This proposal is at the MACOMs for staffing. After the MACOMs review it, the proposal, if approved, could become effective in Fiscal Year 1998.

APACHE READINESS — RECOGNIZING THE “MASTERS”

The challenge of maintaining readiness is never easy with so many variables to handle. Scheduling missions to effectively maintain “bank time”, unscheduled maintenance events, availability of maintainers, soldiers time, sergeants time, unit rotations through training cycles, post details, or any other number of localized events serve as maintenance distractions.

The increasing number of localized events serve as maintenance distractions. The increasing number of stock funded replacement parts is a driving factor in developing better troubleshooting techniques as a cost avoidance measure. The allocation of flying hours and training dollars in a world of shrinking budgets means we have to strive to make the most of available resources in an efficient manner.

The ability to meet readiness goals will be further complicated as units deactivate or reorganize under the Aviation Restructure Initiative. Preparing aircraft to meet transfer standards, accepting aircraft and support equipment, personnel reassignments, and day-to-day missions will test the very fiber of the aviation community. This community of professionals without a doubt will once again show their resolve and determination to overcome any obstacles set in their path. We in the Apache Attack Helicopter Project Manager's Office are proud to serve with the best and recognize their efforts.

In 1992, COL Samuel L. DeLoach, Advanced Attack Helicopter Program Manager, saw the need to recognize the efforts of our professional aviators and maintainers of the AH-64A Apache. COL DeLoach established a means to compare units equally, with consideration given to logistical support and unit priorities, which resulted in four separate categories of Apache “Masters of Readiness” awards: Outside Continental United States (OCONUS), Continental United States (CONUS) based units in Force Activity Designator (FAD) 2 and 3, and the National Guard/Reserve Components.

Illuminating The Invisible

Rangefinders... Designators... Beamriders ... Awesome and accurate are these smart weapons of technology. They rely on an unseen beam of laser energy to guide weapons, unannounced, to their designated targets. That is, until now! With Hughes' AN/AVR-2 Laser Detecting Sets now in the field, U.S. Army and Marine Corps helicopter crews will be forewarned about laser illumination and increase their ability to outsmart those precision-guided threats. The compact sensors in AN/AVR-2 detect the invisible energy and provide advance warning. Armed with knowledge about a laser weapon's type and point of origin, pilots can now maneuver out of harm's way, deploy countermeasures, or destroy the threat.

Some decisions are safe. Some decisions save lives.

If America was suddenly faced with several regional conflicts, our reserves would be the cornerstone to our success. Which raises a critical question: shouldn't the helicopters they fly be the best available?

The UH-60 BLACK HAWK is a helicopter designed to provide our reserves with the speed, the navigational accuracy, the protection and the technology they need to be able to handle the increasing demands of modern warfare. It can lift 9,000 pounds. It can carry 11 combat-equipped troops. It can safely take these troops 250 nautical miles at 150 knots.

It is an aircraft built without compromise. Every rotor and gear, every seam and rivet, every drop of paint, is subject to the closest scrutiny. The design is of the highest quality. The materials are the finest on earth. The process by which they are assembled is the most efficient possible. This constant attention to detail is inspired by an unwavering focus on a clear duty: to provide the army with the most capable helicopter available.

When it comes to our reserves, the UH-60 BLACK HAWK is not just the safe decision. It is the only decision.

In Threat Simulation

Sierra is proud to have developed and is producing electronic warfare threat emitters for the U.S. Armed Services. ASET IV (Aircraft Survivability Equipment Trainer IV - Army) is a manned highly mobile training test system emphasizing tactical realism in operations. MoTES (Mobile Threat Emitter System - Air National Guard) also highly mobile, is designed for remote control operation. UMTE (UnManned Threat Emitter - Air Force) is palletized for fixed site deployment and remote control operation. All are integrated with existing range instrumentation systems.

ASET IV, MoTES, and UMTE utilize state-of-the-art technologies to provide accurate threat representation. Logistical support is enhanced by incorporating many common hardware/software configuration items.

Proven performance, reconfigurable designs, logistics supportability, and Sierra's vast system integration experience allow us to offer EW range integrators the flexibility to meet unique requirements at an affordable cost. Call us today to discuss solutions for your threat simulation needs.

How Do You Find Infinity?

With the new ANV-20/20 from Hoffman Engineering, you can find infinity in the field, on the flight line, or in the back of a transport. This compact, battery operated system allows accurate adjustment of infinity focus, assessment of high and low light resolution, and a visual check for NVD dynamic range.....All in one portable package!

Using a wide aperture collimator, the ANV-20/20 also allows proper adjustment of NVD mechanical aspects such as tilt, alignment and IPD. The ANV-20/20 also features an 8-step "gray-scale" covering a range of 2 1/2 decades to check NVD dynamic performance.

The high resolution, high gain night vision devices of today require today's support equipment. They require equipment from the people who have designed NVD test equipment for over 15 years....

Choose the Platform

The combat tested Stinger-RMP has proven that it is the superior forward air defense/helicopter air-to-air system for today's highly mobile armed forces. Stinger, without modification, has been integrated on ground, helicopter, and naval platforms world-wide to counter the rotary wing, fixed wing, UAV and cruise missile threat.

THEY WON'T KNOW YOU'RE ON THE AIR UNTIL YOU'RE ALREADY IN IT.

In fast-paced battlefield environments, you need to know that your call for forward air support will be translated into action. Now.

The AN/GRC-206 (V5) Pacer Speak radio system from Magnavox is designed to make that happen. Pacer Speak offers HF/SSB, VHF/FM, VHF/AM and UHF/AM capabilities that keep your communications uninterrupted in crowded airwaves; and our most recent enhancements to the Pacer Speak system provide ECCM and COMSEC to assure that your tactical air control communications are secure. Pacer Speak also does an excellent job in traditional air traffic control applications for the re-establishment of battle-closed airfields.

Pacer Speak from Magnavox. By the time they figure your next move, it'll be too late.

New! TEAC Merlin System — 40% Sharper

Now Apaches Can See What They've Been Missing!

The TADS/PNVS system is critical to the Apache's mission. And now TEAC and Merlin have teamed to produce a new scan conversion video system to provide a 40% improvement in image quality and resolution over the existing Apache video system. Plus, the system's Hi-8mm videotape format delivers twice the recording time (2 hours) using standard inexpensive videocassettes and standard commercial video playback equipment. So debriefs don't require special equipment — even for network news use.

But the real payoff is in combat. Where a 40% improvement in image resolution and a square pixel format can make the difference in finding, identifying, and acquiring your target. Yet TEAC's new system costs the same as the present Apache video recorder and is a drop-in, mil-qualified replacement. And, as with the other airborne video recorders that we manufacture for U.S. military aircraft, TEAC guarantees full product support for the life of your program.

Already demonstrated in Apache flight testing, TEAC and Merlin are ready to help the Apaches see what they've been missing!

Two premier defense electronics companies have joined forces to further expand night vision technology—already a key advantage for U.S. Army battlefield helicopters. Now, Heads-Up Display (HUD) will assure safer, more efficient flight operations under all conditions.

AEL and Elbit. The right team for AN/AVS-7 ANVIS/HUD.

AEL, the Army's principal designer of advanced helicopter avionics installations, will lead the ANVIS/ HUD team as program manager, systems integrator and installation designer.

AEL's extensive experience in night vision lighting, together with Elbit's proven ANVIS/ HUD technology, provides the optimum non-development solution to the outstanding Army requirements.

MASTERS

readiness numbers are reviewed for each reportable unit. Units fielded in that calendar year are excluded, as twelve months of readiness data would not be available. The reportable units are put into one of the four award categories, with the unit obtaining the highest average Mission Capable (MC) rate for each category recognized with a plaque and a letter of appreciation. The recognition of these units by the Project Manager's Office helps to strengthen the commitment with the Apache users to continually strive to improve the reliability and availability of the AH-64A fleet. During calendar year 1994, there were 16 battalions with an average MC rate of greater than 75%, the DA goal. The "Masters of Readiness" units in each category and year are displayed in Figure 1.

These units demonstrate that effective leadership and management, supported by dedicated operators and maintainers, can achieve the proper balance of mission and maintenance to effectively employ the AH-64A Apache.

AAAA President's Message

MG Richard E. Stephenson, Ret.

Summer has come and gone, but things haven't slowed down in Army Aviation. The BRAC impact upon the Army Aviation mission area will be difficult in both the long and short run. The St. Louis Lindbergh Chapter of AAAA, the bedrock of our AAAA DAC membership, will obviously be transformed in the transition to Alabama. Overarching all of this, however, is the imperative for our Army to maintain the Army Aviation mission as visibly and as organizationally coherent as is possible. We cannot dismantle the world's center of rotary winged aircraft excellence with an exercise in geography alone. Army Aviation readiness, worldwide; safety, worldwide; and basic airworthiness certification responsibilities; demand a diligence beyond the routine. The Army Aviation community welcomes MG John J. Cusick, the new CG ATCOM, and his wife Patsy, to St. Louis. Best wishes to the Cusicks.

MG Ron Adams hosted me at Ft. Rucker, AL on 11-12 July 1995 to get AAAA and our Aviation Branch in synchronization. He has organized a high level internal to the Army, Aviation Training and Simulation Conference for this fall to bring the new Aviation leadership team together. BG Pete Franklin of STRICOM has replaced John Michitsch, who helped Aviation a great deal. Welcome, Pete!

The AEC Symposium is only a month away, 29-31 October in Louisville, KY. If you're in the Avionics or Aircraft Survivability Equipment business you should be there. This is the once a year opportunity for the green suiters and industry to get together and discuss the latest and greatest in these fields. See page 125 for the preliminary program. We are still accepting late registrations and because the symposium is unclassified again this year, we expect another rush of on site registrations. Contact the AAAA National Office for housing and registration forms.

With the demise of the Aviation Digest, ARMY AVIATION Magazine has become the definitive Army Aviation publication. Authors of Digest materials are encouraged to communicate directly with Bill Harris at AAAA National Headquarters who will fold these materials into future issues of ARMY AVIATION. Bill will stay in synch with the Aviation Center.

Your AAAA Awards Board met 14-15 July 1995 in the great facilities of the U.S. Army National Guard Readiness Center in Arlington, VA, and had automation support on site and superb support from the National Office. Great job Awards Committee Chairman, MG John Riggs. Nearly 300 applicants participated, over $140,000 was distributed, and 55 scholarships/loans were involved in this tremendous program for AAAA's family. See pages 114-118 for a complete listing of our 1995 winners.

In other news, MG Dewitt T. Irby, Jr. moves on to another life after PEO Aviation and a solid 30+ years. Good luck, T. Mr. Larry Holcomb succeeds as PEO.

Remember that this Association is only as good as you are...your interest and participation are vital to our future as an Association representing the Army Aviation family.

$141,500 to Benefit Members

COL John Marr, Ret.

President, AAAA Scholarship Foundation, Inc.

Once again, the AAAA Scholarship Foundation and the AAAA Awards Committee under the direction of Chairman BG(P) John Riggs, has had the pleasure of recognizing academic excellence among you, our membership, and your families.

On 14-15 July 1995 we awarded $141,500 to 55 outstanding students including enlisted, warrant officer, and company grade officer personnel, as well as spouses and children of AAAA members.

I wish you could all participate with us in the selection process to see for yourselves the character and caliber of all our applicants. If you need a little shot of optimism, a brief look through these files would convince you that these people are the best and the brightest. The future of the nation and the Army will remain in good hands.

Over sixty members of the AAAA Awards Committee broke down into work groups and individually voted every file in typical military promotion board fashion. The individual scores were tallied and Order of Merit List (OML) was assembled using only file ID numbers which did not reveal the name of the applicant, or their rank or that of their AAAA member relative.

Only freshmen competed against freshmen, upperclassmen against upperclassmen, and graduate students against graduate students. Likewise, for the dedicated scholarships, only spouses, enlisted, AWO and company grade personnel competed against their respective groups.

The integrity of the process is unsurpassed. Once the OML is established, the scholarships and interest-free loans are assigned in descending order by dollar amount.

This year we had a record breaking 276 applications, an increase of over 100 applicants from 1994. The successful applicants once again were truly impressive in their credentials. For example, the top 25 freshmen, 12 upperclassmen, and 11 graduate students all had 4.0 academic averages.

Unfortunately, we were not able to recognize more of these outstanding students for the simple reason that we have relatively limited resources. If we had more, we could give more. Please consider donating to the AAAA Scholarship Foundation, Inc. Because its administrative costs are borne directly by AAAA, the SFI is able to bring 100% of your donation to bear as awards or award endowments.

Congratulations to all our applicants and winners. Please take a few minutes to review these pages and share our pride in these fine individuals.

AAAA NATIONAL EXECUTIVE BOARD MINUTES

AAAA's National Executive Board (NEB) conducted its Spring meeting during the AAAA Annual Convention in Atlanta, GA, March 29-April 1, 1995. Major actions included:

AAAA/AAPI CONTRACT REVIEW: AAAA-AAPI CONTRACT RENEWAL. A motion was approved to authorize the AAAA Executive Group, consisting of the AAAA President, Senior Vice President, and Secretary-Treasurer, to approve modifications to the contract between AAAA and Army Aviation Publications, Inc., (AAPI) and direct the incoming President, MG Stephenson, to sign the contract extending the term to May 1, 2000. AAPI, under contract, administers the AAAA's programs and activities.

The NEB approved the annual contract review process as follows: AAAA's Contract Review Committee is responsible for annually assessing contractor performance against the existing contract by on or about 1 October of each year and then recommending any and all changes negotiated to mutual agreement with the contractor in a given year by the next 1 January to the AAAA Executive Group. Given consensus of the full Contract Review Committee and majority rule of the Executive Group, the President then is empowered to renew the contract prior to full NEB review. Similar procedures apply to the annual CPI review/approval process.

AWO AFFAIRS: AWO SURVEY RESULTS. CW4 Pisano, [then Chairman of the AWO Affairs Committee] presented the results of the survey of Aviation Warrant Officers at the Aviation Warrant Officer Academy during the past year. The recommendations included: 1) conducting a warrant officer-specific professional session into the professional sessions at the AAAA Annual Convention; 2) publishing more articles by warrant officers and/or on warrant officer-specific subjects in ARMY AVIATION Magazine; 3) implementing a mechanism to retain members who drop because they PCS to areas where a Chapter is not active; 4) re-establishing an AAAA-sponsored Flight Pay Insurance program; 5) sponsoring a Travel Discount Club, and 6) re-surveying every three to five years.

BY-LAWS & LEGAL: PETITION TO AMEND BY-LAWS-SECTION 13, ANTI-DISCRIMINATION. A motion was approved to add the Section 13 to the AAAA By-Laws as follows:

13.1-The Association shall not discriminate in membership on the basis of race, color, sex, national origin, religion, age, or physical disability.

CONVENTION AND SYMPOSIA: AAAA CONVENTION-FUTURE CONVENTION SITES - 1997. A motion was approved to approve Louisville as the site of the 1997 AAAA Annual Convention.

Nap-of-the-Earth communication.

The U.S. Army specified the performance levels. Make it eyes-out, easy to learn and simple to use. It had to include high connectivity, with embedded automatic link establishment (ALE), data modem and electronic counter countermeasures (ECCM).

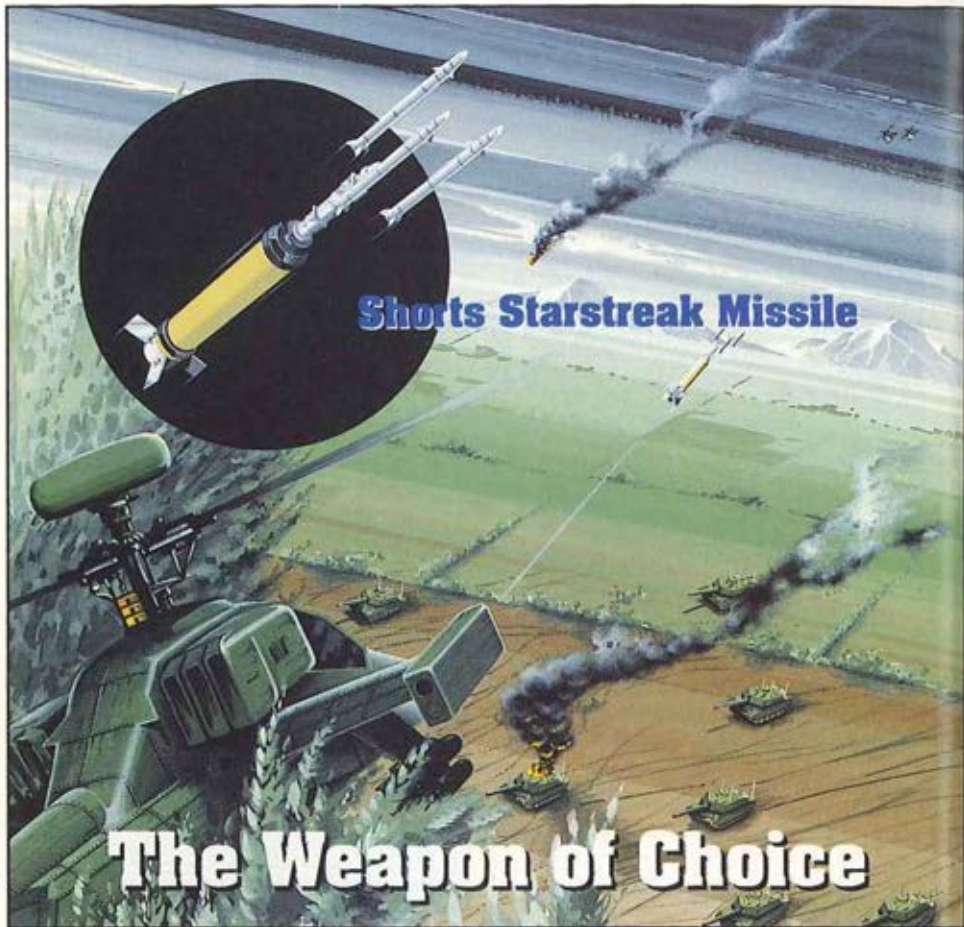

Rockwell's Collins Avionics & Communications Division delivered it all, including full digital signal processing, field programmable ADA software and a spare card slot. The AN/ARC-220 Nap-of-the-Earth (NOE) high frequency communications system is the result of a true partnership with the Army. We're proud to be able to place this technology in our soldier's hands.
