AVIATION WARFIGHTERS

by Maj. Gen. Anthony Jones

As the end of any year draws near, organizations have a natural tendency to reflect on past accomplishments. Whether we reflect on the accomplishments of the last month, year or decade, having an understanding of where we have been often clears the uncertainty of where we are going. During the recent past, the warfighters of Army aviation have been key players in the successful missions of our armed forces. In the midst of becoming a smaller Army, we also acquired many new missions in unfamiliar countries such as Kuwait, Somalia, Haiti, Bosnia and Macedonia, while maintaining our forward presence in Korea and Germany. Aviation warfighters have been there and can be proud of the great accomplishments we have made.

A reporter once asked five-time major league baseball batting champion and future Hall of Famer Tony Gwynn if he was satisfied with his accomplishments. He replied, "No. I'm happy and proud of what I have done. But, I'm not satisfied. The minute you're satisfied with where you are, you aren't there anymore." Hearing this story, Gen. Reimer commented, "This is not bad advice for players in any game."

Like Tony Gwynn, our aviation warfighters should be proud of what they've done, but not satisfied. In this time of rapid change, the U.S. Army still has one constant — the objective to fight and win the nation's wars. Aviation Branch is actively and aggressively experimenting with new warfighting techniques, technology, missions, organizations, and equipment. Today, we may not have all the resources needed to move as rapidly as possible toward future capabilities, but we have a process that works. We are committed to maintaining the successes of our past and increasing our effectiveness and relevance for the future. In order to do this, we must continue to recruit, train and retain the best warfighters our branch can provide. It is not the equipment nor the technology, but rather the warfighting soldiers that make us successful. They are the heart and soul of our branch and our Army.

Gen. Gordon Sullivan, former chief of staff of the Army, described the intangible value of our soldiers best: "People are our greatest strength. Time and time again, visitors from all over the world come to the United States. They see soldiers, sailors, airmen, marines and members of the Coast Guard. Inevitably, on the way home from their visit, they will tell one of the Joint Chiefs, or the chairman or the civilian political leadership: 'You have great equipment, but your troops are better.'"

Prior to the end of the Cold War, the world was dangerous, but predictable. In contrast, today's world is relatively unpredictable, and our military leaders face many new challenges in the field. Through the myriad of military actions, from peacekeeping in Bosnia, deterrence and show of force in Kuwait, to a forward presence in Korea, Army aviation is always there. It is a tough challenge for our warfighters to prepare for a variety of assignments. In many ways our new challenges now are far greater than those we faced during the Cold War. We cannot rest upon our past accomplishments; we must remain relevant to the needs of our Army, thus requiring constant change. Gen. Reimer said, "We must face the world as it is, not as we would like it to be." And I would add, readiness never takes a day off. It must be foremost in the minds of our military leaders when the question arises — who shall I send? To meet these future opportunities we must continue to hone our readiness through our collective training of our warfighting tasks.

The warfighting spirit in Army aviation is alive and well. Take time to acknowledge the outstanding efforts of our aviation warfighters. Your tremendous efforts in the field have not gone unnoticed by the senior military leadership of this country. Please take time during this holiday season to thank your officers, soldiers, civilians and their families for their tremendous efforts. I look forward to hosting our warfighting commanders during the Aviation Leaders' Training Conference, Jan. 31 through Feb. 5, here at Fort Rucker. Please have a happy and safe holiday season — Above the Best!

MODERNIZING THE ENLISTED FORCE

By MSgt. Lisa Deere

One of the numerous issues currently being worked by the Aviation Proponency Office at Fort Rucker is an initiative previously called "Mission Tracking," now known as the Modernized Enlisted Aviation Force Initiative (MEAFI). The MEAFI will train all of the Total Army conventional force enlisted aircraft repairers in a modernized airframe and supports the Army's desire to expeditiously retire legacy aircraft. Three of the current seven Career Management Field (CMF) 67 aircraft-repairer MOSs will merge into the remaining four and comprise the new mission tracks:

- Recoding MOS 67N (UH-1 Helicopter Repairer) to 67T (UH-60 Helicopter Repairer) will bring the remaining UH-1 repairers to a modernized airframe and may require some transition training. This will produce the Utility Track.
  - MOS 67U (CH-47D Helicopter Repairer) will remain unchanged under MEAFI and will constitute the Heavy Lift Track.
- MEAFI will modernize all enlisted aircraft repairers and:
- Enhance reserve-component capability to support Army contingencies.

- Improve promotion, re-enlistment and re-enlistment bonus opportunities for soldiers who are currently in "non-mod" MOSs.
- Allow soldiers to track by mission type throughout their careers.

Conceptually, every skill level 1 soldier will attend a modernized course to produce the appropriate MOS qualification (MOSQ) during Advanced Individual Training at the U.S. Army Aviation Logistics School (USAALS) at Fort Eustis, Va. Upon AIT graduation, soldiers going to units with "non-mod" equipment will be "downtrained" by means of a short transition course. Whether this course is taught at USAALS, the Army National Guard's Eastern Area Aviation Training Site (EAATS) or Western Area Aviation Training Site (WAATS), or at home station is still undecided.

There are several other hurdles — chiefly fiscal resources and constraints — that also have to be cleared to make MEAFI a reality. However, this initiative enjoyed the support of the vice chief of staff of the Army during the July 1998 Aviation Functional Area Assessment, and options to address these issues are being pursued by USAAVNC, USAALS and the Army staff. We'll keep you advised as MEAFI crosses the line of departure and approaches the objective!

MSgt. Lisa Deere is the Branch Chief, CMF 67 Branch, in the Aviation Proponency Office at the U.S. Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala.

The MEAFI strategy consists of the following MOS realignment actions:

- Recoding all MOS 67Y (AH-1 Attack Helicopter Repairer) to 67R (AH-64 Attack Helicopter Repairer) will bring the remaining AH-1 repairers to a modernized airframe and may require some transition training. This will produce the Attack Track.
- Recoding MOS 67V (Observation/Scout Helicopter Repairer, OH-58A/C) to 67S (OH-58D Helicopter Repairer) will bring the remaining OH-58A/C repairers to a modernized airframe and may require some transition training. This will produce the Scout Track.

 BOEING

FOR SOME, THIS IS NOT A PRETTY PICTURE.

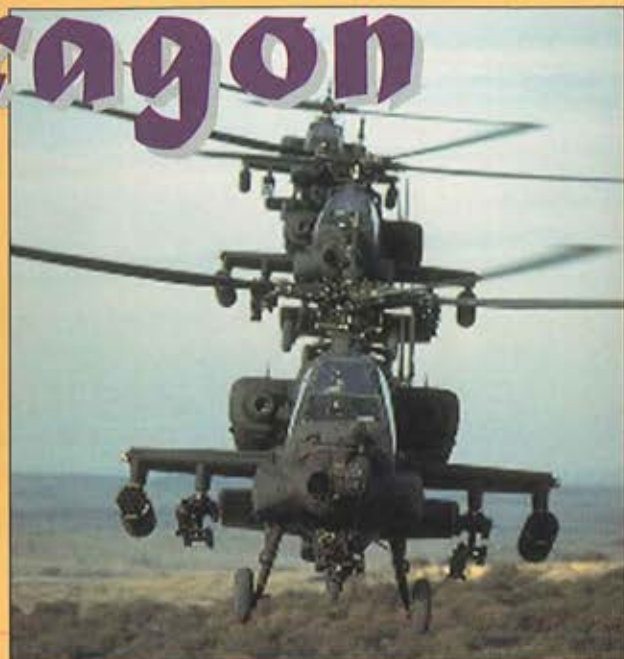

Together, the RAH-66 Comanche and the AH-64D Apache Longbow can help the U.S. Army dominate the battlefields of the 21st century. The Comanche's advanced technology provides critical reconnaissance, and the Apache's precision weapons system supplies overwhelming firepower. The complementary capabilities of the Comanche and Apache give our battlefield commanders what they need to overcome hostile forces while protecting our own.

Wings of the Dragon

by Lt. Gen. William F. Kernan

XVIII Airborne Corps' aviation units stand ready to deploy and fight anywhere in the world in 18 hours or less. Aviation units from the 18th Aviation Brigade; 229th Avn. Regiment; 82nd Avn. Bde.; 101st Avn. Bde.; 159th Avn. Bde.; 3rd Avn. Bde.; 10th Avn. Bde.; 4th Squadron, 2nd Cavalry Regt.; and the 224th Military Intelligence Battalion provide the corps' commander a flexible ability to attack in depth, shape the battle, conduct reconnaissance in depth across the corps' front and sustain the force simultaneously throughout the battlefield.

During fiscal year 1998 these aviation units proved time and again that they are up to the task of performing as the national command authority's strategic crisis-response force — manned, trained and ready to deploy rapidly by air, sea or land.

As the shadow of the XVIII Abn. Corps' Dragon spread across the United States, Caribbean, Middle East and Europe, the "Wings of the Dragon" provided the field commander the attack, reconnaissance, assault, heavy lift, command-and-control, air traffic service and fixed-wing assets necessary to accomplish the mission. Whether you have Apaches or Kiowa Warriors showing their teeth in Bosnia; Black Hawks providing agility and mobility to counter drug smuggling in the Caribbean and supporting the synchronized ballet of troop movements in Bosnia; or Chinooks flexing their muscles by power-lifting equipment in support of units at combat training centers; XVIII Abn. Corps' aviation units were always there on time and on target.

While executing a flying-hour program in excess of 120,000 hours, XVIII Abn. Corps deployed aviation units in support of operations Joint Guard/Joint Forge in Bosnia; JTF-6 in the Southwest United States; operations Desert Thunder and Southern Watch in Kuwait; Exercise Bright Star '98 in Egypt; Operation Bahamas, Turks and Caicos (OPBAT) in the Caribbean; participated in eleven CTC rotations, two Division Warfighter Exercises, Joint Task Force Exercise Purple Dragon and numerous Division level training exercises; and took part in disaster-relief operations.

In addition to these deployments, XVIII Abn. Corps aviation units displaced in the face of a threatening hurricane. Responding quickly by dispersing to refuge sites, affected units dispelled any notion that they must have preparation time to deploy and showed that they stand ready at all times if called upon, whatever the mission.

The quality, competence and professionalism of XVIII Abn. Corps' soldiers and leaders were evident during every deployment or mission. Unit commanders knew their jobs, staff planning was comprehensive and well coordinated, pilots met mission requirements skillfully and safely, and our enlisted soldiers carried the load to completion. Let I forget, it was the sacrifices and teamwork of the best spouses in the Army, and their unwavering support for their husbands and wives, which ultimately ensured success.

In closing, aviation units across the XVIII Abn. Corps' are decisively engaged every day - preparing for, executing or returning from some form of training or real-world deployment. While the pace is rugged, it is with pride and professionalism that each mission's objectives are met. Regardless of the aircraft flown or the mission requirement, soldiers make the "Wings of the Dragon" soar. These great Americans have proven that they are truly committed to something larger than personal wants; they and their families are committed to selfless service of their nation. Their courage and devotion to duty ensures the success of Army aviation and XVIII Abn. Corps.

III Corps

Leading Aviation into the 21st Century

By Capt. Mary Herrick

Since the Vietnam War, the "sound of freedom" is the moniker given to the familiar sound of the UH-1's blades beating the air. Use of the Huey during that war put rotary-wing aviation into the forefront of U.S. Army doctrine. Though the sound has changed over the years from the familiar "whop, whop, whop," the results and impact of helicopters on modern doctrine and tactics has not. III Corps is a living testament to the power and impact the helicopter has on the modern battlefield.

III Corps is actively leading aviation into the 21st century. The corps' aviation assets consist of units from the 1st Cavalry Division, 4th Infantry Div., 3rd Armored Cav. Regiment, 21st Cav. Brigade and the 13th Corps Support Command. Each of these units possesses a unique quality contributing to III Corps' success on the battlefield.

The 1st Cav. Div. has the first unit in the Army to field the AH-64D Longbow Apache attack helicopter. The unit, 1st Battalion, 227th Aviation Regiment, under the command of Lt. Col. Michael Riley, reported to the 21st Cav. Bde. for this momentous undertaking on April 6, 1998.

The brigade's former commander, Col. Winn Noyes, and his team of professionals developed a special program helping the 1st Battalion, 227th Aviation, develop a new Mission Essential Task List (METL). They also provided collective instruction in all arenas of attack helicopter battalion operations and maintenance. An AH-64A Apache battalion previously focused on the defeat of one enemy regiment. Now the AH-64D Longbow Apache increases this lethality to the point that a battalion has the capability of defeating an entire enemy division.

In addition to this important fielding, the rest of the aviation brigade began deploying to Bosnia in August 1998, and will provide support to the United Nations Stabilization Force until October 1999.

The 4th Inf. Div. is truly leading the Army as the "Digitization Division" in the Advanced Warfighting Experiment (AWE). The division is constantly testing new equipment and ways of fighting. The aviation brigade recently returned from a rotation at the National Training Center (NTC) at Fort Irwin, Calif. This rotation was unique because the 4th Bde. served as the primary maneuver headquarters for an armor-heavy task force, an artillery task force, an engineer task force, and its own division cavalry squadron and attack helicopter heavy aviation task force. Overall the rotation was successful and many useful lessons were learned. This will lead to important improvements in tactics and aviation's role as a maneuver force.

The 21st Cav. Bde., although not directly a warfighting brigade, is a most critical piece of the most successful Army in the world. While it is widely known that the 21st conducts collective aviation unit field training for the AH-64 Apache and the OH-58D Kiowa Warrior, the unit also works intensively with National Guard and Army Reserve units. Most recently, the 21st prepared Task Force Panther (consisting of units from the North Carolina National Guard's 1st Bn., 130th Regt., and Alabama's 1st Bn., 131st Avn. Regt.) for deployment to Kuwait in support of Operation Southern Watch. This was the first time a National Guard unit deployed with Apaches on this type of mission.

The 3rd ACR's 4th Avn. Squadron, the largest battalion-sized aviation organization in the Army, is fielding the OH-58D Kiowa Warrior.

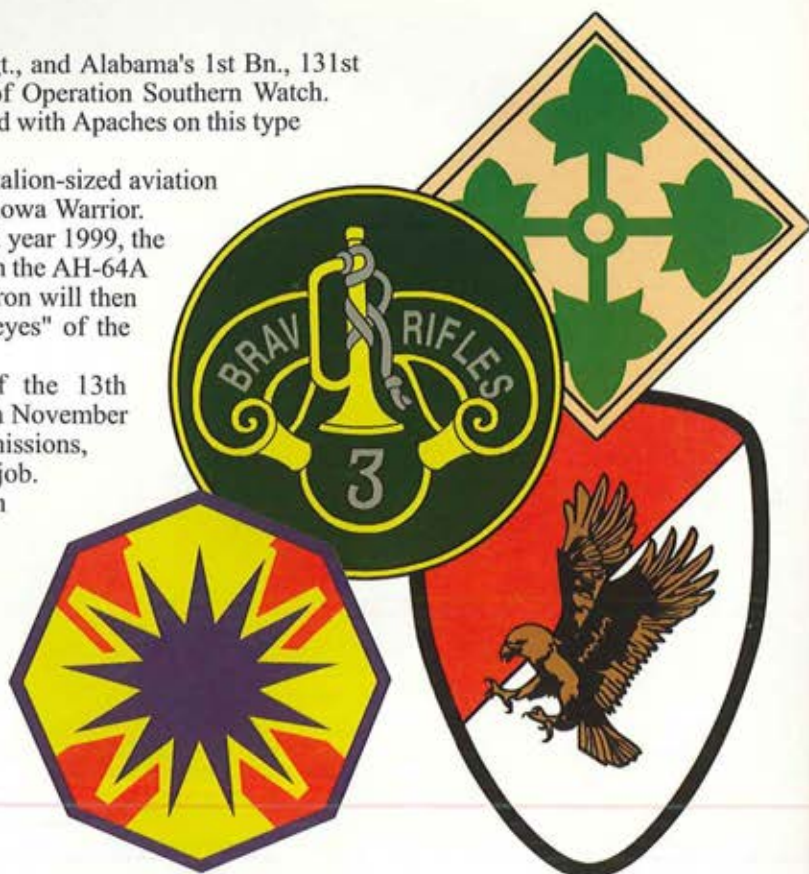

When the fielding is completed by the end of fiscal year 1999, the 4th Sqdn., 3rd Cav., will have completed fielding both the AH-64A Apache and the OH-58D Kiowa Warrior. The squadron will then possess the capability to even further extend the "eyes" of the Army's only active armored cavalry regiment.

The 507th Medical Company, an element of the 13th COSCOM, completed the fielding of its UH-60As in November of 1997. The unit continues to perform lifesaving missions, but now has better assets with which to do that vital job. The 82nd Med. Co., at Fort Riley, Kansas, will begin its fielding of the UH-60A in FY99.

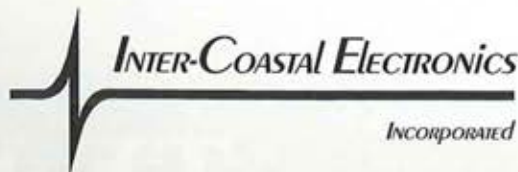

The completion of the 82nd Med. Co.'s fielding will result in the removal of the UH-1 from the III Corps active-duty inventory. Many are sad to see the old workhorse leave, but the "sound of freedom" continues with III Corps leading the way with more modern and lethal helicopters.

Mission Diversity, Mission Accomplished

WARFIGHTERS

By Col. E. J. Sinclair, Lt. Col. D. G. Reininger and Maj. D.L. Ball

Prior to the 6th Cavalry Brigade's move to Korea from Fort Hood, Texas, two years ago, deep-attack helicopter operations and cavalry-screening operations were the unit's primary focus. These operations continue in Korea with the 6th Cav. serving as the commander in chief's (CINC) reserve, but have also expanded to include over-water counter-special operations forces operations. The 6th Cav.'s diverse warfighting missions present many new and challenging training opportunities for the brigade.

While conducting over-water operations against North Korean seaborne special operations forces elements, the 6th Cav. works directly for the theater Naval Component Commander (NCC). This operation is obviously different from land warfare deep operations and requires extensive coordination and new command relationships. While TACON is not a new command relationship, an AH-64 brigade working directly for the U.S. Navy is. As a result, executing the decide, detect, deliver and assess methodology creates new challenges. To ensure good C2, Counter-SOF Control Areas (CSCA) are created much like engagement areas in the deep battle.

Because of the unique challenges of distinguishing friend or foe watercraft, at night, over terrain which provides no cover or concealment, a joint effort is essential. The 6th Cav. performs "T-Bone" tactics by launching helicopters from a strip alert upon notification from the Maritime Air Sector Operations Center (MASOC), which is normally a Navy Aegis-class cruiser. Upon entering the CSCA, a communications link is made with airborne Navy LAMPS helicopters or P-3 surveillance aircraft, which direct the Apaches to bullseyes. These bullseyes are similar to the IPs used by fixed-wing aircraft in over-land JAAT operations. Final vectoring, including distance and heading, is provided by the LAMPS/P-3 in contact with the AH-64s and the MASOC. When the Apaches visually identify the target, the MASOC vessel authorizes target engagement.

While these procedures are not insurmountable, equipment interoperability, rapid personnel turnover and the absence of habitual command relationships make cyclic training a must. Proficiency of aircrews in night over-water missions present an additional challenge. Aerial gunnery over water ranges is limited, but the 6th Cav. has developed such innovative measures as adding over-water special mission tasks IAW TC 1-210 and coordinating with the U.S. Air Force for combat search and rescue coverage, furthering our joint interoperability training.

These innovations allow Army aircrews to employ their AH-64 weapon systems over water during quarterly gunneries. The 6th Cav. also conducts joint Hellfire ranges with the Apaches lasing targets for the Hellfire missiles launched from Navy LAMPS helicopters. These live-fire exercises, coupled with regular CPX simulations, provide the necessary training to remain prepared for NCC missions if needed. This training is only one part of the high OPTEMPO sustained throughout the year. Simultaneous with over-water operations, the brigade continually plans for potential deep operations should the CINC decide to shape the future battlefield.

These deep operations are coordinated with the Eighth U.S. Army (EUSA) Deep Operations Coordination Cell (DOCC). The DOCC uses intelligence information from such theater-gathering assets as the Guardrail Common Sensor (GSC), Airborne Reconnaissance, Low, (ARL) aircraft, and unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs). Army Space Command assets provide the 6th Cav. with imagery intelligence in the form of static photos and computer-generated fly-throughs that allow attack helicopter commanders to see the terrain where they will have to fight.

The brigade staff uses these assets to plan deep operations and help the squadron Apaches avoid enemy air defenses en route to destroy enemy armor, CAGs and DAGS, thus facilitating future friendly ground-force operations. To successfully operate deep and ensure the suppression of enemy air defenses (SEAD), the DOCC provides fire-support coordination between 6th Cav. and Republic of Korea (ROK) field armies' cannon artillery assets while crossing the FLOT; MLRS and ATACMS beyond the FLOT en route to the engagement area; and USAF CAS and interdiction assets preparing AH-64 attack-by-fire positions. In addition, the EUSA DOCC coordinates complimentary SEAD at H-12 hours to H-Hour on electronic intelligence (ELINT) hits across the 6th Cav.'s deep area. These efforts are necessary for the Apache's survival behind enemy lines and for success in destroying, defeating or attriting the enemy in advance of a U.S. ground-forces attack.

As any conflict on the Korean peninsula continued, CONUS-based forces would arrive in theater, creating a completely different set of reception challenges which would have to be met even as units were engaged in warfighting. As it continued deep operations, the 6th Cav. would grow to five times its current size and would be placed under the operational control of the U.S. III Corps.

Training opportunities with the corps DOCC have become less frequent since 6th Cav. moved to Korea. Therefore, annual training events — including III Corps traveling to Korea for exercise Ulchi Focus Lens and 6th Cav. traveling to Fort Hood to participate in the III Corps BCTP Warfighter ramp-up — and CPX are maximized. In each of these exercises, III Corps assets add to the efficiency of attack helicopter deep operations.

The 6th Cav.'s operations in Korea are diverse. The new warfighting missions present the 6th Cav. commanders and staffs many challenges. No longer must the commander be focused only on deep-attack helicopter operations; he must widen his view to encompass missions throughout the Korean theater of operations. The OPTEMPO is high and so are the payoffs, as the 6th Cav. Bde. is trained and ready to fight and win.

V CORPS:

WARFIGHTERS

"It Will Be Done!"

By Lt. Gen. John W. Hendrix

The V Corps' motto highlights the time-honored words personified by aviation soldiers serving in America's only forward-deployed corps. These soldiers serve in some of the finest combat, combat support and combat service support units anywhere in today's Army. Serving overseas, an "ocean closer" to many of our country's vital interests, these units are ready to respond to any contingency and provide V Corps and our NATO allies a tremendous capability.

The Past

Missions conducted by the aviation units assigned to V Corps have spanned the entire spectrum of conflict. Before the 1989 fall of the Berlin Wall, air cavalry and attack helicopter units patrolled the West German border and medium-lift units performed nuclear surety missions that helped win the Cold War.

In 1991, V Corps aviation units demonstrated the lethality and flexibility helicopters bring to the battlefield during the liberation of Kuwait. A few years later, the same aviation units that helped defeat the Iraqi Army were providing peace and stability support in the Balkans. All of V Corps' combat, combat support and combat service support aviation units contributed immeasurably to the success of the Bosnia mission from its inception in December, 1995, through the transfer of authority to the 1st Cavalry Division on October 7, 1998.

The Present

The increase of stability and support operations (SASO) in Europe introduced new challenges to all soldiers, but particularly our aviation units. Unlike the days of the Cold War when traditional command and control structures were used, our aviation forces demonstrated tremendous flexibility and leadership by conducting split-based operations in environments and conditions that defied traditional employment and sustainment methods. Despite all the challenges, V Corps aviation soldiers accomplished all missions in a totally professional and outstanding manner.

Today, "Victory Corps" aviators are still dispersed throughout Europe performing myriad tasks that directly contribute to our nation's interests and to stability in Europe. Corps aviation soldiers only recently concluded 11 years of Beirut Air Bridge support to our American Embassy. The Task Force Able Sentry (TFAS) flight detachment continues to provide general support to the observation posts that overwatch the Macedonian border. A newly formed UH-60 unit, Company B, 5th Battalion, 158th Aviation Regiment, in Aviano, Italy, will support V Corps missions south of the Alps and provide aviation training opportunities to the Southern European Task Force. The 3rd Bn., 58th Air Traffic Services (ATS) Bde., will continue its oversight of Army air traffic control services in Bosnia.

Finally, virtually all V Corps aviation units regularly participate in the joint staff's Partnership for Peace exercises, which occur in such places as Africa, Great Britain, Scandinavia and Eastern Europe. In short, all V Corps aviation units are either supporting the wide array of corps contingency missions or training to do so. Our goal now, however, is to refocus our efforts and sharpen our collective warfighting skills.

Focus For the Immediate Future

This winter's Corps' Battle Command Training Program (BCTP) capstone exercise will greatly enhance V Corps' ability to effectively synchronize all battlefield operating systems. Training for high-intensity conflict is still the most demanding method to improve our warfighting proficiency.

All components of our aviation forces are critical to the success of this exercise.

Attack helicopter units — in conjunction with other deep fires — provide the aerial maneuver essential for successful corps deep operations. Combat support and service support aviation forces move soldiers and materiel quickly across the battlefield and provide the airspace command and control to sustain our momentum and rapidly defeat enemy forces. When completed, the BCTP exercise will have greatly enhanced V Corps' ability to plan for and conduct combat operations.

It is hard to tell what the future will bring, but one thing is certain: The future of aviation in V Corps is bright. Fielding of two new UH-60 Black Hawk companies in our corps aviation brigade and refinement of the aviation force structure is underway. Our divisions continue to modernize our fleet of aircraft with the fielding of "L" model Black Hawks to the 1st Armored Div. In addition, the unit-level logistics system for aviation and air mission planning systems are being fielded throughout the Corps.

Finally, U.S. Army, Europe, is supporting our initiative to improve and upgrade the flight-simulation facilities in Europe.

But, through it all, regardless of the tools, soldiers are our most valuable resource. They must be trained to standard in a tough, realistic environment that sustains our ability to win our nation's wars. Army aviation is a dynamic and unforgiving business. It requires discipline and focus of all soldiers at all levels; traits V Corps aviation soldiers readily exhibit.

Whether the future brings peace or conflict, when V Corps is called, aviation soldiers will most likely be involved and dedicated to mission accomplishment with the venerable words in their minds that no matter what the mission: "It will be done!"

BRIEFINGS

In October two officers requested Career Field Designation into two of the functional areas being created under the new officer professional management system (OPMS XXI). Col. Michael Alvis, a year group 1974 aviator and former battalion commander, became the first and most senior officer to enter into functional area 59, "Strategic Plans and Policy." Alvis is currently serving as an Army Senior Fellow at the Harvard Center for International Affairs. The other officer, Capt. Angela Cotton, a former U.S. Total Army Personnel Command assignment officer, chose Functional Area 43, "Human Resource Management." She now works in the OPMS XXI office and handles all the FA43 pronency issues.

The Connecticut Army National Guard's 1109th Aviation Classification Repair Activity Depot reopened in October following an $18 million renovation and expansion. The specialized helicopter maintenance facility, located adjacent to the Groton-New London Airport, is one of only four such U.S. organizations. The two-year upgrade included a 75,000-square-foot hangar addition; new engine test and spray paint buildings; a new parts warehouse annex, a new arms room and unit supply area; additional administrative offices; classrooms; a modern dining hall and locker facilities.

Sanders, a Lockheed Martin company, has delivered the first Common Missile Warning System hardware component to GEC Marconi Avionics' Radar and Countermeasures Systems Division for the United Kingdom's WAH-64 Apache program. Sanders will provide CMWS sets for the self-protection suite designed to protect the new British Army helicopters against advanced heat-seeking and radio-frequency guided missile threats. Sanders is developing the AN/AAR-57 CMWS as a common system for approximately 25 U.S. military aircraft types, including the Army's AH-64 Longbow Apache.

The Boeing Company's Rotorcraft Pilot's Associate - an advanced cockpit-management system which recognizes verbal commands and acts appropriately - made its maiden flight in October in a modified AH-64D Longbow Apache prototype. The RPA system was developed under an $80 million advanced technology demonstration contract with the U.S. Army Aviation Applied Technology Directorate at Fort Eustis, Va.

The U.S. Army Ranger Training Brigade at Fort Benning, Ga., introduced the MILES 2000 tactical engagement simulation system into its training rotations in early October, marking the first operational U.S. use of the advanced Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System. Cubic Defense Systems, maker of the MILES 2000, said the early employment will enable the Army to put the system through a range of operational scenarios before material release and full fielding of MILES 2000 at Fort Stewart, Ga., next summer.

Honeywell Defense Avionics Systems and TRW Avionics Systems Division have joined forces to produce a new transponder for military aircraft. A modified version of the widely used commercial Level 4 Mode S transponder, the new XS-950 Mode S/IFF transponder will allow military aircraft to operate within the civil airspace domain of the Federal Aviation Administration and International Civil Aviation Organization requirements for reduced separation while also providing IFF reporting required in military airspace.

The MART Corp. has developed a one-step waste-stream processing technology which clarifies wash solution for reuse and prepares the waste products for disposal. The MART EQ-1 technology replaces evaporators, ovens, filtration systems, centrifuges, multi-stage chemical processes and presses, and encapsulates all organic and inorganic waste-stream materials - such as oil, grease, solvents and high concentrations of such metals as chromium and cadmium - to form a dry, concrete-like nonleachable material that is almost always eligible for non-hazardous landfill disposal.

The first prototype Boeing Sikorsky RAH-66 Comanche returned to the air on October 24 during a one-hour test flight in West Palm Beach, Fla. The aircraft recently completed a comprehensive 100-hour inspection and refit, and the flight-test team will assess the modifications before installing new flight-control software and embarking on an expanded flight-test regime. The second RAH-66 prototype is scheduled to make its first flight in March.

The U.S. Air Force Aeronautical Systems Center has awarded The Boeing Company a 10-year, $1.2 billion contract to perform engineering and logistics support and systems modifications for the Air Force Special Operations Command's fleet of 87 C-130 variant aircraft. Work on the contract will be performed at Boeing's Special Operations Forces Aerospace Support Center at Fort Walton Beach, Fla.

Simula Safety Systems and PRIMEX Aerospace Corp. have teamed to develop the Cockpit Air Bag System (CABS) for use in helicopters. Based on crash-restraint technologies developed for automotive use, the CABS is designed to remain inflated and restrain aircraft occupants to prevent secondary-impact injuries caused by contact with objects in the cockpit. The system is presently being developed for military helicopters with initial production scheduled to begin in 1999. The technology is also being evaluated for commercial helicopter and other aircraft applications.

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank all the fine men and women of the Army Aviation Association of America (AAAA) — of which I am a Life Member — for your recent presentation to me of AAAA's prestigious Order of Saint Michael's (OSM) Bronze Medal. I would like to especially thank all the men and women of the Aviation Center Chapter (Fort Rucker) and especially Col. Lee Gore, the chapter president; Capt. Dave Salter, the chapter vice president in charge of awards and my nominator for the prestigious OSM; and Maj. Dave Stark of the Aviation Center's DOTDS Directorate.

Since my October 1993 arrival at Fort Rucker as the post's Air Force liaison officer, it has been an enjoyable assignment for myself and my family. This was my first and only real assignment with the Army and, as I found out first-hand, regardless of your service or the differences in our flight suits, aviators are aviators and may we always be the same. Thanks again, it means a lot to this old bold USAF aviator.

Sincerely,

Lt. Col. Clifford F. Moriarty, USAF

Dear Editor:

My hat is off to CWO 4 Gary Helmer (Ret.). It certainly took a lot of courage for someone in his position to write about the problem of the lack of appropriate qualifications and/or misclassification of flight-training personnel [see Mailbox "Who Cares About ..." in the October issue]. This continues to be a systemic problem ever since the introduction of the visual devices. When we only had the UH-1FS, the classification of 1712 (training specialist) was appropriate for the console operator/academic instructor. The training specialists acted as flight operations or air traffic control (ATC) while seated at the console. They checked our flight plans; set the wind direction and speed; made sure the requested malfunctions were available; and issued appropriate clearances. These duties didn't require the skills of an instructor pilot and were graded accordingly on the general wage (GS) schedule. Job Descriptions were written commensurate with the duties performed.

Over the years, however, visual simulators were introduced. The Aircrew Training Program (ATP) and Aviation Flight Regulations have changed drastically. We now have aircrew training manuals for each of our airframes. As a result, the rules governing qualification and validation requirements of instructor pilots (IPs) and instrument flight examiners (IEs) have changed as well. Simply stated, to impact any instruction the IP/IE must be integrated in an ATP, and the IP must be qualified as an IP in the aircraft/simulator in which duties are performed. This is clearly stated in the AR/ATM and further clarified by STACOM 167.

Civil service personnel working at our simulator facilities have, more or less, just moved along in the system unnoticed. As old systems were replaced with the new visual system, civil service personnel remained in place. Worse, job descriptions were changed to reflect work required of the new system and resulted in an upgrade on the General Wage Scale. Even new people have been hired. Some meet all (IP/IE) requirements, some are pilots (not IP), and some are not even pilots! Again, most are classified into the 1712 series as training specialists. There is not and cannot be any integration into an ATP for a person assigned in this classification.

Now you might ask, "How did this happen and why does it continue to happen?" The short answer is: the management of the simulator facility and personnel working there are normally the responsibility of the garrison commander and under the director, DPTMSEC, TDA. So, personnel working at the facility probably resolve any issue involving the simulator. There is usually no aviation command oversight. Aviators go to the SFTS and usually fly an instrument flight unless accompanied by a unit IP. If you are only flying instruments, the training specialist is now in the ATC environment. He is right at home performing console-operator duties. The crew usually has no questions concerning emergency procedures, aircraft specific operations or ATM tasks, though crews do occasionally ask questions. How those questions might be answered should be the concern of every commander and flight standards person out there.

I would be remiss if I failed to mention the truly qualified and appropriately classified instructors and evaluators working at a few of the simulator facilities. They are correctly classified in the 2181 Aircraft Operation series.

The availability rate of our simulators is great. The contract maintenance teams are doing an excellent job with what they have to work with. Yes, it would certainly be a training multiplier if the systems were all upgraded using available new technologies. However, none of this matters if we don't have fully qualified trainers working with our aircrews.

As this is a systemic problem across the board, this issue deserves the attention of an appropriate Department of the Army staff element. A U.S. Total Army Personnel Command-level consistency review of each and every 1712 position even remotely associated with the flight simulator must be conducted.

Thanks for your time!

Dear Editor:

Not long ago I received a little pin indicating I had been a member of AAAA for 40 years. I started flying for the Army as a liaison pilot in 1943. My first combat mission was flown with about 200 hours in an L-4 Piper Cub.

I have been a bit disappointed in the last few years because Army Aviation has printed little about the history and heritage of Army aviation. I believe that today's young pilots need to hear stories of Army aviation's history just as we older pilots needed to hear the tales of Lindbergh, Rickenbacker and Doolittle.

So, I was delighted to see a heritage article in the August-September issue. However, the article was somewhat disappointing, in that it talked a lot about the senior officers who earned their wings late in their careers. I can tell you that a lot went on before the generals got into the picture. They would not have had the chance to earn their wings if a few old liaison pilots hadn't pondered how Army aviation was going to get out from under the Air Force's thumb.

In the early 1950s Col. (later Gen.) Carl I. Hutton moved the Aviation School from Fort Sill, Okla., to Fort Rucker, Ala. He assigned his director of combat development, Col. Dave Cogswell, and his team to select and train some senior colonels to be pilots. Most of the generals mentioned in your August-September article were trained by those liaison pilots.

Though many of us didn't see the big picture at the time, those senior officers-turned-pilots did their jobs: they gradually became generals, which gave them the rank to get things done. I did think, though, that teaching 45-year-old men to fly was risky; they didn't have the quick reflexes of those pilots who'd learned to fly as young men.

It was also interesting to read about the arming of liaison aircraft. Believe me, it wasn't a new idea. As young liaison pilots in combat, we really didn't give a damn what the Air Corps thought. We did what we had to do to win. I bet today's young pilots would like to have known "Bazooka Charley." He used 3-inch anti-tank rocket launchers mounted on the struts of his liaison plane to kill five German tanks in North Africa. And on Leyte, in the Philippines, I used a tommy gun to engage some Japanese troops who had earlier fired at one of our aircraft.

People may not remember now, but during World War II the Air Corps did everything in its power to stop the ground forces from having their own air observation assets. Would you believe that, at the height of WW II, Air Corps commanding general Hap Arnold recommended to the Army chief of staff that the Army's liaison aircraft program be scrapped? The ACS ash-canned that stupid memo, because at that time Cubs in the Southwest Pacific Theater were firing 95 percent of the observed artillery!

History and heritage are important. If you don't know and appreciate them, you will make the same mistakes over and over again. I hope that, in the future, you will include more such articles.

Remember, Army aviation only exists to support the guys on the ground. Don't forget it; the pre-WW II Air Corps did!

Lt. Col. Jean L. Chase (Ret.)
Portland, Ore.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh Award

The Order Anne Morrow Lindbergh was established by the U.S. Army Aviation Center in 1997. It is an annual award which recognizes individuals who have voluntarily contributed to the improvement of the community. These individuals must demonstrate the highest standard of integrity and moral character, display an outstanding degree of personal ethics, and selflessly serve the aviation community with distinction.

Since this award is intended to honor that very special spouse who truly goes above and beyond all others, no more than one award per year will be presented by a battalion/squadron.

Award nominations must be received by the Aviation Propensity Office, ATTN: ATZQ-AP, Fort Rucker, Alabama, 36362-5035, no later than January 15. Additional information on this award and nomination packets may be attained by contacting Capt. McAdoo, DSN 558-1420 or (334) 255-1420 or by visiting the Aviation Propensity webpage at <http://www-rucker.army.mil/ap/ap.htm>.

Maj. Gen. John Henry Stanford

Former Maj. Gen. John Henry Stanford, who upon his retirement from active duty became a widely respected school administrator, died Nov. 29 in Seattle, Wash. He spent 30 years in the Army, ultimately becoming executive assistant to former Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

Following his 1991 retirement Maj. Gen. Stanford became a school administrator. In 1995 he was named the first black superintendent of the Seattle city school system, drawing national attention because he was one of the few people who were not educators chosen to lead a big city district. He was so respected for his education policies that he was invited to speak at the 1996 Democratic National Convention.

Maj. Gen. Stanford was diagnosed with leukemia in April, and ultimately succumbed despite chemotherapy and a stem cell transplant.

GEN Hamilton H. Howze, Ret.

As this issue was going to press, we learned of the passing of Gen. Hamilton H. Howze, Ret., December 8, 1998.

Gen. Howze graduated from the Military Academy in 1930 and retired in 1965. He last served concomitantly as the commander of the United States Forces in Korea, the Commander-in-Chief of the United National Command, and Commanding General of the Eighth Army. From 1965 to 1974, he was a vice president with Bell Helicopter in Fort Worth, Texas.

In the mid-1950s Gen. Howze emerged as one of a handful of perceptive army officers who recognized the potential of a sky cavalry — divisions in which helicopters replaced ground vehicles in providing fire power, mobility, intelligence, and logistical support. As the first director of Army Aviation, Gen. Howze's vision came to fruition in the 1960s when he presided over the U.S. Army Tactical Mobility Requirements Board, known as the Howze Board, which made sweeping recommendations to Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara and proved the viability of sky cavalry in combat. Gen. Howze was President of the AAAA from 1967-69 and chairman of the Army Aviation Hall of Fame for many years. A more complete review of the life of this remarkable man will be presented in the next issue of ARMY AVIATION Magazine. Contributions may be made to the AAAA Scholarship Foundation, Hamilton H. Howze Scholarship Fund.

The Army Aviation Standard Of Excellence

Chief Warrant Officer (CWO 3) (later Maj.) Frederick E. Ferguson entered the Army from Arizona as an enlisted man and received his warrant officer commission upon graduation from flight school in May 1967. He was immediately assigned to Vietnam and served there until May 1968 in Company C, 227th Aviation Battalion, 1st Cavalry Division.

During the action of Tet in 1968, Ferguson distinguished himself through the rescue of a downed helicopter crew from a confined area within the city of Hue, Vietnam, while under intense enemy fire. For this Jan. 31, 1968 action, he was awarded the Medal of Honor, becoming the first Army aviator to be so honored in Vietnam and the first in modern Army aviation history.

The Medal of Honor was presented to Ferguson by President Richard M. Nixon on the South Lawn of the White House on Armed Services Day in 1969.

Later, Ferguson continued to serve Army aviation as a member of the Arizona National Guard's 997th Aviation Bn.

CWO 3 Ferguson was inducted into the Army Aviation Hall of Fame, sponsored by the AAAA, on April 8, 1983.
